Reurairtel dated 7/5/91, and telephone call between SSA [REDACTED] Crime Analyst, National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime, and SA [REDACTED] FBI San Rafael
Resident Agency on 11/4/91.

Materials submitted with referenced airtel were compared to the previously submitted letter signed "Lord's Avenger." It is the opinion of the NCAVC that the information mailed to the editor in Garberville, California, was not prepared by the author of the letter signed "Lord's Avenger."

The following differences lead to our opinion:

1. The "Lord's Avenger" letter was typed most likely to avoid handwriting analysis and the Garberville material contained pages of hand printing.
2. The "Lord's Avenger" letter contained numerous religious references and the Garberville material did not.
3. The "Lord's Avenger" contained information explaining how the author attempted to do harm to another and the Garberville material did not express such harm.
4. We believe the "Lord's Avenger" letter was constructed to claim responsibility for the bomb, which exploded in JUDI BARI'S vehicle. The construction and submission of the material forwarded to Garberville, California, is unclear.

5. The information sent to Garberville, California, is nonsensical in its format and content. The "Lord's Avenger" letter had a purpose and expressed thoughts and responses to what was happening around the author.

6. The "Lord's Avenger" letter was constructed by an individual(s) with average to above intelligence. The Garberville, California, letter's author(s) favors someone of below-average intelligence. We also have a belief that this author(s) may suffer from some form of mental illness. This is evidenced in the recorded journal entries.

The NCAVC remains attentive to the San Francisco Division's investigative needs in this matter.

December 10, 1991

Honorable Frank G. Riggs
House of Representatives
Washington, D. C.

Dear Congressman Riggs:

On September 26th, Neil J. Gallagher, Section Chief, Counterterrorism Section, Criminal Investigative Division along with a member of my staff and [redacted] Associate Counsel, Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights, met with you and [redacted] at which time a briefing was provided relating to an FBI investigation concerning your constituents Judi Bari and Daryl Cherney. Agent Gallagher indicated during that briefing, that the pending status of the case and a firmly established policy of both the Department of Justice and the FBI precludes the FBI from providing any additional information related to the investigation as was requested by your letter of November 5th.

The FBI has and will continue to conduct a thorough and unbiased investigation of this matter. The FBI continues to work with the local authorities, and the bombing incident involving Bari and Cherney remains a priority investigation within the FBI. While the FBI was aware of Earth First and the Redwood Summer protesters, no prior investigation of the groups nor Judi Bari or Daryl Cherney occurred before the bombing incident of May 1990. Let me emphasize that our present investigation does not involve any organizations in which Ms. Bari and Mr. Cherney may participate.

If the FBI can be of further assistance to you, please contact me or my staff in the Congressional Affairs Office, (202) 324-4515.

Sincerely yours,

John E. Collingwood

Security (IS) or Civil Rights investigations (CR) dating back to the mid 1960s, identify [redacted] as a long time civil rights activist in Mississippi. He is described as being a [redacted] of the [redacted] and this organization's [redacted] in Mississippi.

A review of these references reveal that [redacted] has been interviewed by the FBI on a number of occasions over the past 20 to 25 years and on each occasion was uncooperative and antagonistic. [redacted] arrest record reveals a history of arrests by local authorities for disturbing the peace and other arrests in connection with his civil rights activities, but nothing is reflected which indicates that [redacted] initiated violent or destructive activity.

[redacted] is described as follows:

Race	White
Sex	Male
Date of Birth	[redacted]
Place of Birth	[redacted]
Eyes	Blue (wears glasses)
Hair	Brown
Height	5' 7"
Weight	150 pounds
Social Security Account Number	[redacted]
Address	[redacted] Mississippi

In view of [redacted] history of being uncooperative with and antagonistic toward FBI Agents in the past, no attempt will be made to interview him unless advised to do so by San Francisco.

Dear Senator Cranston:

This is in further response to your January 30th inquiry on behalf of several of your constituents who are concerned about the bombing incident involving Ms. Judi Bari and Derryl Cherney.

The FBI and the Oakland, California, Police Department are jointly investigating this incident, and I am not at liberty to comment specifically regarding this case because FBI and Department of Justice policy prohibits comment on pending investigations. This policy has existed for a number of years and serves to prevent any impact on judicial proceedings relative to criminal charges that may result from the investigation. However, I do want to assure your constituents that, contrary to their belief, this case has received and continues to receive appropriate investigative attention by the FBI.

Your enclosures are being returned as requested.

Sincerely yours,

Danny O. Coulson

Dear Mr Senator,

I am very upset about what the F.B.I. is doing to Judi Bari and Derryl Cherney. They are the environmental activists who were seriously injured by a pipe bomb, May 24th in Oakland, which was in the back seat of their car.

The F.B.I. has not investigated any other possible suspects in the case except for the victims themselves. They are accusing these people of a violent terrorist act, without considering the non-violent oath they demand from all their volunteers and the non-violent practices they promote. The F.B.I. is not considering the many death threats that Judi Bari, and Darryl Cherney have received, including an incident in which Judi Bari's car was rammed into by a logging truck while she was on her way to a demonstration, as good cause to investigate the possibility that the bomb was placed in her car by someone else.

Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney are the most visible spokespersons for Redwood Summer, a movement to bring people from across the country to Humboldt County to protest the deforestation practices of the lumber companies and force them to slow down their rate of cutting. As spokespersons, they have every reason to keep a clean record, and not jeopardize the reputation of the movement. They were in the midst of a state wide promotional tour for Redwood Summer when the bomb went off. It was the perfect opportunity for someone to plant the bomb to discredit the movement.

If anyone has any authority over the F.B.I., I should hope that it would be our representatives in the Senate and in Congress. I urge you to investigate the false charges being brought against Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney. The F.B.I. and the big lumber companies; Louisiana Pacific, Georgia Pacific, and Pacific Lumber, all have good reason to want to see the Redwood Summer movement be disrupted and discredited. The lumber companies are not going to be able to cover up their atrocious actions for much longer. I hope that you will be at the head of the investigation to determine who actually planted that bomb, and how we can stop the lumber companies from destroying whole ecosystems in the Pacific Northwest.

Sincerely

Dear Senator Cranston,

I am appalled by the injustice being perpetrated against the two Earth First activists, Bari and Cherney. Were you aware that local authorities had refused to investigate multiple death threats to these and other activists? This is not only a breach of legal responsibility, but is also stupid. These activists may not be mainstream, but they are highly visible, and have always stressed non-violence.

I demand that a full investigation be conducted to find the real perpetrators of the bombings at the mill, and of Bari's car! The public will not stand for our legal system looking the other way from attempted murder. You may not agree with the objectives of these two, but I am sure you agree that all citizens deserve equal protection under the law, and due process. Ask for an investigation, a lower, reasonable bail, and find out why [redacted] belongings were taken from his van and exploded. I want accountability from these officials. I want to see action on your part to insure that Bari and Cherney receive fair treatment.

Sen Alan Cranston

Washington DC 20510

Dear Senator Cranston;

I am personally disgusted with the way the case of Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney has been handled to this point. I live and work in Ukiah, and am convinced that neither of them knew that they carried a bomb in their car when it exploded.

Since Judi and Darryl were on a tour committed to non-violence, and were requiring a non-violent promise from anyone wishing to be involved in the upcoming protests, I see no viable reason for their need to carry explosives. It flies in the face of logic. They would have nothing to gain, popular support to lose with any such a connection.

On the other hand, for the general population to perceive that they were involved with explosives would greatly hurt their cause. And I personally am convinced that a frame-up is what we're witnessing. It takes neither a conspiracy of all the police agencies in the state nor great intelligence to frame someone, especially when that someone is not popular. If I wanted to discredit EarthFirst!, Judi, Darryl, or anyone else involved in the environmental movement for that matter, I would set up something such as the event that we all witnessed this week.

I can see how difficult it would be to have local police questioning local potential perpetrators of this act, but it seems to me that this is exactly what has to happen. While to suspect someone else means a lot of extra work, that is exactly what justice demands.

I am further appalled that Judi is not being permitted visitors at the hospital during this time of great personal need. Is there some fear that she will get up and run away? That someone will smuggle in a suicide pill? How about some common human compassion? Any guard can just as easily be in the room with Judi and a visitor as outside the door. She has at this point been convicted of no crime, and is no criminal. What is sure is that she is a seriously injured human being.

Please take a stand on this issue, not for personal gain nor in anticipation of a groundswell of political support, but because it is the right thing to do.

Sincerely,

[REDACTED]

Dear Alan Cranston,

We are outraged at the arrest of Darryl Cherney and Judi Bari in Oakland, California, May 25, 1990 on the suspicion of possession and transporting explosives. We are members of their community and feel confident in their commitment to nonviolence. They were on a successful musical tour/campaign and had no reason whatsoever to be carrying explosives. We, who know them well, know that they would not have anything to do with any kind of weapon; not a rock, nor a stick, and most assuredly, not an explosive.

It runs against the grain of a democratic society that innocent victims of an outrageous crime are immediately accused of perpetrating the crime. Judi and Darryl are not terrorists.

We demand that the investigation be reopened to find exactly who has been making continuous threats on Judi's life and who planted the bomb in their car.

Dear Senator Cranston,

I am outraged at the arrest of Deryl Cheney and Judy Barni in Oakland on May 25th.

It runs against the grain of democratic society that innocent victims of an outrageous crime are immediately accused of perpetrating the crime.

I demand that the investigation be re-opened to find exactly who has been making continuous threats on Judy's and Deryl's lives and who planted the bombs in their car. "Earth First" has publicly affirmed their commitment to non-violence, and they would never have anything to do with any kind of weapon.

Sincerely,

Memorandum

To : SAC, OMAHA [redacted] (P)

Date 12/1/89

b7E

From : SA [redacted]

Subject: UNSUB:
[redacted] VICTIM;
EXTORTION
OO: OMAHA

On 11/28/89, [redacted] Nebraska, telephone number [redacted] came to the Omaha Office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) to advise that he had been the victim of an extortionate telephone call. [redacted] advised he is [redacted] a news service which provides news summaries to individuals and businesses. As such, [redacted] stated his company maintains toll free numbers in both Iowa and Nebraska. [redacted] stated that his Iowa number is (712) 323-2323, and his Nebraska number is (402) 393-9393.

[redacted] provided an original telephone answering machine recording of telephone calls received on the (712) 323-2323 line during the period 9:00 p.m., 11/27/89, to 5:00 a.m. 11/28/89. b6 b7C

The following paragraph paraphrases the statements made by the caller on the tape:

"I am coming to your office tonight to kill you or get our shit. I am pissed because you are trying to rip us off. I had to fly in from Chicago. Have the shit or have the money. We want our money. We don't want to hurt you. We don't care if we kill you. We just want our money. Thank me, thank [redacted] thank [redacted] and thank the people that set you up. I will not be held accountable because I am on medication."

[redacted] stated he has been plagued by crank calls for several months, since he established separate numbers for Iowa and Nebraska for his business. He said the calls came on his Iowa number. He said he has had an inordinate number of calls that consist of one ring. When answered, there is either a dial tone or the sound of someone hanging up. A second type of call comes from individuals calling a now defunct Council Bluffs taxi cab company that was assigned the number now assigned to his business. A third type of call seems to be coming from children who call to leave mostly nonsense messages, although sometimes the messages from the children are sexually explicit.

[REDACTED] stated the telephone call received during the night of 11/27-28/89, is from a male whose voice he has heard before, however, whose identity he does not know. [REDACTED] said the call is the first one he has received that mentions bodily harm or a threat to his life. [REDACTED] stated he knows of no incident in his personal or business life that would precipitate such a call. He stated he is not a gambler nor is he involved in drugs.

[REDACTED] stated that U S WEST COMMUNICATIONS is aware of the numerous "crank" calls he has been receiving and has monitored his telephone for the last month. He stated that [REDACTED] of U S WEST COMMUNICATIONS in Minneapolis, Minnesota, is aware of his current problems with the crank calls. [REDACTED] stated that U S WEST's monitoring of his incoming calls ended a day or two ago.

[REDACTED] stated he would continue to record his incoming calls and would advise the writer if any additional call was received.

At approximately 3:00 p.m. on 11/28/89, [REDACTED] telephonically advised the writer that after appearing at the Omaha office of the FBI on 11/28/89, he telephonically contacted [REDACTED] of U S WEST COMMUNICATIONS. [REDACTED] advised him that the trap on his telephone had not been removed and that the identity of the caller had been determined.

It is recommended that this matter be opened and assigned to the writer.

Knoxville indices were further checked with negative results for all of the above subscribers except the HIGHLANDER RESEARCH CENTER AND EDUCATION CENTER. Numerous references are contained over a number of years concerning this organization. This is a non-profit private school originally founded in 1932 as the HIGHLANDER FOLK SCHOOL, Monteagle, Tennessee, by MILES HORTON. At that time, its purpose was stated as providing education to Southern trade unions with an effort to better relations between labor and industry. A previous internal security investigation was conducted because of alleged Communist ties during the 1950s, the school was actively involved in the Civil Rights Movement.
It allegedly introduced the song "We Shall Overcome" and had ROSA PARKS in one of its classes prior to her 1955 Montgomery, Alabama, bus incident which resulted in the organization and unification of various civil rights leaders and groups. The school moved to Knoxville in 1961 and became involved in the problems of rural Appalachia poverty, abuse of land development, welfare rights, rural health care, and Indian rights. It subsequently moved to its current location at Mascot, Tennessee. The last known director was [REDACTED] who assumed that position after the retirement of MILES HORTON

b6

in 1973. The school is apparently still operating with efforts to educate individuals and groups concerning social awareness and how to use education in the areas of social change and reform. There is no indication that this school has ever taught or been involved in using violent actions for causes which it supports.

The following investigation was conducted by Special Agent [] at Lincoln, Nebraska, in an effort to identify the subscriber to telephone number []

On March 25, 1992, a review of the 1991 Lincoln, Nebraska, Polk's Directory, lists [] Nebraska 68506, as the subscriber to telephone number [] is employed at ROPER & SONS MORTUARY, Lincoln, Nebraska.

On the same date, a review of the current Lincoln, Nebraska, telephone directory listed F.L. DIVIS as residing at the above address and having the same telephone number. No listing could be found for F.L. DIVIS in any recent Criss-Cross (Polk's) Directory. A listing was found for FERNINANDL DIVIS in the 1978 Polk Directory. FERNINANDL was listed as residing at the above address and having the above telephone number and as [] FERNINANDL was described as being employed as a District Engineer with the State of Nebraska DEPARTMENT OF ROADS (DOR).

On the same date, contact with the Lincoln, Nebraska, Telephone Company, determined that the above telephone number has been subscribed to by F.L. DIVIS since August 13, 1965.

b7c

On the same date, contact with [] (Protect Identity), State of Nebraska DOR, resulted in the following information:

[] advised that he recalls FERD DIVIS as having been a former Chief Engineer of the Lincoln District, DOR, however, DIVIS died 10 or more years ago as a result of a heart attack while he was jogging. [] recalled that he is survived by his []

On March 26, 1992, a review of the State of Nebraska DEPARTMENT OF MOTOR VEHICLES, Driver's License Records, determined that [] was issued Nebraska driver's license number [] on September 28, 1988, expiration date [] 1992. [] is described as a white female, date of birth [] with brown hair, hazel eyes, 5'3", 127 pounds.

On the same date, a review of records at the LINCOLN POLICE DEPARTMENT and NEBRASKA STATE PATROL were caused to be made, resulting in no record regarding [] On the same date, it was determined that Omaha FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION (FBI) indices were negative regarding []

Court upholds lawsuit by Earth First activists

By Cecily Burt
Tribune staff writer

A federal district court judge in San Francisco yesterday refused to dismiss a lawsuit against the Oakland Police Department, the City of Oakland and the FBI brought by environmental activists Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney.

The suit alleges the law enforcement agencies failed to adequately investigate a car bombing in Oakland two years ago that injured the two activists. It also alleges they were falsely arrested and their property searched without sufficient cause.

The agencies and City of Oakland had sought to have the suit thrown out.

Judge Eugene F. Lynch did dismiss a companion lawsuit Bari and Chenrey brought against Humboldt and Mendocino counties, the City of Ukiah, and various law enforcement agencies and officials within those three jurisdictions.

Both Bari and Cherney are members of Earth First and had staged protests at logging sites in Humboldt and Mendocino counties.

The activists were injured when a bomb went off inside Bari's car on May 24, 1990 at the intersection of Park and MacArthur boulevards in Oakland.

Bari was hospitalized with serious injuries, and both she and Cherney were subsequently arrested for illegal possession and transportation of explosives.

The ruling clears the way for the activists' attorneys to subpoena FBI and police files on the bombing investigation. The files have been sealed pending the outcome of the countersuit brought by the police agencies and the city.

"We're in the vault, basically," said William Simpich, attorney for Bari and Cherney. "We can now engage in discovery of police and FBI records — at least we have a right to ask for it, anyway."

Oakland City Attorney Jayne Williams said she was not surprised by the ruling.

"This was a preliminary motion in the first stages of the proceedings. We attempted to clean up the plaintiffs' complaint — it was more of a philosophical treatise than a legal document," she said.

"The judge did narrow the focus of the lawsuit and a lot of stuff was thrown out. Now there will be some discovery and I expect we'll make some additional motions to dismiss (the lawsuit)."

Earth First wins round in bombing

By Tracie Reynolds
Tribune staff writer

SAN FRANCISCO — In a blow to the federal government, a U.S. District Court judge yesterday once again refused to dismiss a lawsuit against the FBI, the Oakland Police Department and the City of Oakland brought by Earth First activists Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney.

Judge Eugene Lynch said he would not reverse his Sept. 2 decision allowing the environmentalists' $3.75 million lawsuit against federal agents and police to go forward.

The lawsuit, filed last May, alleges that the law enforcement agencies failed to adequately investigate a May 24, 1990 car bombing in Oakland that injured Bari and Cherney.

In the lawsuit, the activists claim their civil rights were violated because they believe they were targets of the bombing for political reasons. Earth First members frequently have come under fire from timber and law enforcement officials for their unorthodox and sometimes violent tactics to help preserve old-growth redwood forests in Northern California.

FBI agents and city officials have sought to get the lawsuit thrown out on grounds that it lacked sufficient evidence to prove that law enforcement agencies "intentionally or recklessly" steered the investigation toward accusing Bari and Cherney of the bombing, as the lawsuit alleges.

During the weeks following the incident, police believed the two activists were transporting an explosive device in the car when it went off.

The two activists were arrested in connection with the bombing, which occurred on Park Boulevard near Oakland High School, but they were not charged with the crime after an Alameda County prosecutor cited a lack of evidence.

But R. Joseph Sher, a Washington, D.C., attorney representing four FBI agents named in the lawsuit, reiterated yesterday that there "is no evidence to support the charges."

Lynch also gave defense attorneys 60 days to decide whether or not to contest the ruling. Until then, neither side can subpoena files pertinent to the bombing incident. No hearing date was set.

"The only purpose of this was stalling," said Bari, who attended the ruling with Cherney and a group of Earth First activists, who sang folk songs outside the federal building after the decision.

After the bombing, Bari, 42, was hospitalized with a shattered pelvis, and both she and Cherney, 35, were subsequently arrested for illegal possession and transportation of explosives.

BAY AREA DATELINESBombed activists can sue FBI, judge rules

SAN FRANCISCO A federal judge has again rejected the government's efforts to bar two environmental activists, hurt in a 1990 bombing, from suing FBI agents for allegedly botching the investigation.

U.S. District Judge Eugene Lynch denied a Department of Justice motion to dismiss four FBI agents as defendants in a civil rights action brought by Earth First! members Judy Bari and Darryl Cherney, who were investigated as suspects in the bombing of their car in Oakland.

Lynch's action leaves the agents and Oakland police as defendants in the lawsuit, which asks for a renewed investigation of the bombing and $1.65 million each in damages from the law enforcement agencies.

Bari and Cherney say investigators neglected to pursue leads that would identify the bomber, but instead arrested them on suspicion of transporting homemade explosive devices. The DA's office decided there wasn't enough evidence to prosecute.

Dear [redacted]

Reference is made to your recent conversation with SSA [redacted] of this office.

Based on an administrative review, this office is closing its investigation of the Explosive and Incendiary Devices Case wherein Judith Beatrice Bari and Darryl Reed Cherney were injured in a bombing of their vehicle on May 24, 1990, at Oakland, California. During the course of the investigation, there has been insufficient evidence developed which could lead to identification and/or indictment of those responsible for this act.

This investigation was hampered from the start by the extraordinary circumstance in which the victims refused to cooperate and provide information which could help solve this crime. Other investigative avenues which have been pursued have failed to lead to a satisfactory conclusion of our investigative efforts.

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Date of transcription 6/8/93

In response to a telephonic request, Special Agent (SA) [redacted] telephonically contacted [redacted] telephone number [redacted] with regard to a complaint about vandalism. [redacted] provided information as follows:

On June 7, 1993, at a location just off of U.S. Highway 101, near Scotia, California, a group of individuals were involved in a spontaneous demonstration because of the presence of Governor PETE WILSON at Pacific Lumber Company. [redacted] stated that as the protest group formed, various people drove by and made typical gestures of disapproval. He added that the demonstration participants had parked their cars and left their cars unattended while they demonstrated.

Upon returning to their vehicles at approximately 4:00 PM, the people who had been involved in the demonstration discovered that approximately 11 cars had been vandalized. The vandalism included broken windows, broken headlights and valve stems removed from tires.

[redacted] stated that it was his desire to report this occurrence to the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) as a "hate crime." [redacted] stated that the vandalism was not proceeded by any kind of written or verbal warning and there was no such message left at the vehicles. However, [redacted] added that it is his opinion that whoever committed the act of vandalism did so in a conspiratorial manner because all of the vehicles were damaged at or near the same time, which would have required the participation of more than one person.

[redacted] was advised by SA [redacted] that the vandalism as described by himself did not appear to fit the criteria as a violation of any known federal statute. SA [redacted] advised [redacted] that he would be contacted in the event that it could be determined that the vandalism was a part of a violation of any federal statute. Hurry up call on car bomb?

■ Early focus on 'Earth First! pair
questioned

By Tracie Reynolds
STAFF WRITER

A congressional subcommittee wants to know why FBI officials and Oakland police were so quick to suspect two radical environmentalists of a still-unsolved 1990 car bombing in Oakland.

In a letter last month to FBI headquarters in Washington D.C., Rep. Don Edwards, D-San Jose, requested the FBI files on the first three months of the investigation into the bombing, which injured Earth First! activists Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney.

Within an hour of the May 24, 1990, blast, the FBI and Oakland police said Bari and Cherney were prime suspects, claiming the two were transporting an explosive device in Bari's car when it went off. The two were never charged.

Cherney, 36, and Bari, 43, have maintain the bombing was in retaliation, for their efforts to preserve old-growth redwood forests.

"The bombing remains highly controversial in Northern California and among the environmental community." I hope we can address these lingering concerns through the oversight process," Edwards wrote in a Aug. 6 letter to then-acting FBI Director Floyd Clarke.

Edwards is chairman of the House Judiciary Committee's Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights.

In May 1991, Bari and Cherney filed a multimillion-dollar lawsuit against federal agents and Oakland police, claiming they were wrongly suspected. The explosion took place on Park Boulevard near Oakland High School.

The lawsuit claims the bomb probe was conducted with "reckless disregard for the truth" and "deliberate indifference toward the rights" of the two Earth First! activists.

Earth First! bombing probe

EARTH FIRST'S ACCUSATIONS THAT THE FBI mishandled a probe into the 1990 car bombing that seriously injured two of its members got a boost with Congressman Don Edwards' announcement that he will investigate the matter.

"The bombing remains highly controversial in Northern California and among the environmental community," the San Jose Democrat wrote in a letter requesting access to the FBI's files on the case. "I hope we can address these lingering concerns through the oversight process."

Edwards' probe was prompted by new evidence derived from internal police documents suggesting that the FBI's investigation and arrest of Earth First! organizers Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney was far from impartial. The evidence, obtained in the course of a lawsuit against the FBI and the Oakland police, includes apparent links between an FBI crime lab analysis of the bomb and the text of the anonymous "Lord's Avenger" letter to a Santa Rosa newspaper.

The letter seems to finger radicals for the bombing and authenticates itself by listing the bomb's components — a list presumably known only to the bomber. But the letter writer apparently betrays a connection to the FBI by making errors regarding the size of the pipe bomb identical to those in the bureau's lab report. The letter also details the bomb components in the same order as the report.

Bari found further reason for suspicion in an Oakland police report. Twenty minutes after the explosion, the report identified her and Cherney as radical activists linked to attempted destruction of nuclear power plant high-tension lines in Arizona. That information came from the FBI, Bari said.

"The FBI has a need for enemies, a need to keep a sense of threat active among its patrons," Bari's attorney Dennis Cunningham said. "There is evidence that with the Cold War over, they have shifted their focus to environmentalism as a target of their secret police activities."

The FBI originally identified Bari and Cherney as prime suspects in their own bombing, claiming that the bomb went off accidentally while the Earth First!ers were transporting it in their car.

Spokesman Rick Smith said the FBI stands by the thoroughness of its investigation, which ended last May without any charges being filed. "There is no campaign against environmentalists," he said. "Our investigation would have gone further," he said, "if we had gotten more cooperation from the victims."

Reminded that the FBI, in sabotaging the Black Panther Party, has a track record of political investigations, Smith replied, "Cointelpro was 25 years ago. There are laws against that now."

The Edwards investigation, an informed source said, has been undertaken as a favor to another congressman. "Call it an oversight inquiry," he said, pointing out that the affair has been relegated to a subcommittee where a staffer plans merely to read over the paperwork and write a report. "It's not that big a deal."

Earth Firsters to get day in court

Suit against FBI over car bombing will be resolved

ASSOCIATED PRESS

A federal appeals court has left intact a lawsuit against FBI agents by two radical environmentalists, who were injured in a car bombing and say the agents tried to frame them.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused the FBI agents' request to dismiss the suit by Judi Bari and Daryl Cherney. The court said the claims in the suit, if proven, would show violations of their rights.

Bari and Cherney were driving through Oakland in May 1990 on a recruiting trip for an Earth First anti-logging protest when a pipe bomb loaded with nails exploded in Bari's car. Bari's pelvis was crushed. Cherney's injuries were less serious.

Oakland police immediately searched a home where the two had been staying, declared them the leading suspects and arrested them for investigation of transporting explosives. The district attorney later said he lacked sufficient evidence to prosecute. The case remains unsolved.

In their lawsuit, Bari and Cherney said the FBI had known they were innocent but treated them as suspects and was responsible for their unfounded arrests and searches and slanderous statements about them. The goal was to tarnish their organization and deter their protests, they said.

They also said the FBI had never seriously investigated the bombing or the numerous threats they

Bari

and other anti-logging activists had received. The FBI denied the allegations and said its investigation was thorough and unbiased.

U.S. District Judge Eugene Lynch dismissed portions of the suit, including all claims against local police, but let Bari and Cherney proceed with claims against Richard Held, then the chief of the FBI's San Francisco bureau, and three FBI agents. Lynch's ruling was upheld Wednesday by the appeals court in a 3-0 decision.

The opinion by Judge Pamela Rymer said one accusation in the suit, if true, could show that the FBI had known Bari and Cherney were innocent. That was a claim that the agents who looked at the car knew that the bomb had been under the seat, and out of view of the passenger and driver, but reported falsely that it had been behind the seat and in clear view.

If the suit's allegation is correct, Rymer said, no reasonable law enforcement officer would have believed that there were grounds to arrest Bari and Cherney or to give police information for a search warrant.

The suit also said the FBI agents had conducted baseless investigations of other Earth First members, and had taken advantage of the bombing to portray the organization as violent and lawless.

Those allegations, if proved, could show that the agents intended to interfere with the activists' "rights to demonstrate and communicate their message about the environment," Rymer wrote.

The ruling allows pretrial proceedings in the suit to continue.

articles [REDACTED] published in the Anderson Valley Advertiser concerning the bombing of Judi Bari and DARYL CHERNEY.
After reviewing these articles, SA [REDACTED] re-contacted [REDACTED] [REDACTED] on May 9, 1997, and [REDACTED] provided the following information:

[REDACTED] advised some of the persons mentioned [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] seem to be white supremacist type people. [REDACTED] believed they were members of the Church of Jesus Christ Christian Aryan Nations which he described as being affiliated with the Aryan Nations [REDACTED] pointed out that the Aryan Nations spawned the very violent group named, "The Order," which was responsible for numerous acts of violence including armored car robberies in Northern California. [REDACTED] [REDACTED] information regarding the Aryan Nations from the Coalition for Human Dignity which he described as a watchdog civil rights group based in northwestern United States. [REDACTED] also advised that the Aryan Nations tried to recruit timber and fishery workers from Northern California during 1991. The persons mentioned in the articles are timber workers and [REDACTED] suggested these persons may have been recruited by the Aryan Nations during the 1991 recruitment drive. However, [REDACTED] had no hard evidence to support this.

[] advised that [] mentioned in the submitted article, had ample motive to "take out" JUDI BARI at the time of the bombing of her vehicle. [] also advised that [] and someone by the name of [] (last name unknown(LNU), are all connected to the "crank" trade in Northern California, and they all had the motivation, the history of this type of violence, and good reasons to derail "The Redwood Summer," which was organized with the assistance of JUDI BARI. [] believes [] and the others would have been motivated because of their hatred for Earth First and their employment in the timber industry. [] offered no actual evidence to support his allegation that these persons were involved in drug dealing or the bombing of JUDI BARI.

[] believes his articles support the launching of an FBI investigation into these persons to determine whether they were involved in the bombing of JUDI BARI and DARRYL CHERNEY.

[] also wanted to make the FBI aware of his investigation for "personal reasons" because of his fear of what may happen to him as a result of investigating these persons. [] advised he is well aware of the dangers inherent in dealing with people as he had described.

[] also attempted to receive confirmation that some or all of these persons have been arrested previously on some form of explosives charges which he believes may have been brought by the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Agency. [] was advised the FBI would be unable to confirm any arrests made by the ATF. SA [] directed [] to the courts or to a service like LEXIS/NEXIS. [] advised that the courts in Trinity and Mendocino Counties had not computerized. [] was advised the U.S. District Court system was fairly centralized and he would be able to make those determinations with a quick visit to the San Francisco Court House. [] did not appear willing to search in those avenues.

At the conclusion of the conversation [] advised he hoped he had provided enough information to entice the FBI to investigate this matter further. SA [] advised [] it was the final determination of the squad supervisor whether or not more investigation on this matter should be conducted. However, SA [] did advise there did not appear to be sufficient predication to launch an investigation into these persons based upon the information presented.

Piercy's Sinister Land Scam

by Mark Heimann

Lynette Hulsey's health was failing in 1995, the medical bills piling up. At age 60, the strokes that had partially paralyzed her and left her speech distorted seemed to come more frequently. Her long-time partner, best friend and confidant, John Hockett, was having his own health problems that year, compounding the financial burden. The couple was in a bind and it was time for some tough decisions.

Lynette and John were living on a 47-acre ridgetop above the little hamlet of Piercy the northernmost town in Mendocino County, about half way between Laytonville and Garberville off Highway 101. Lynette had purchased the property in 1981 for its 180° view of the Eel River below, the mature second growth of fir and hardwood, and the year-round creek whose source just above the cabin provided unlimited gravity flow water. It was an idyllic setting and Lynette planned to live out her life there. But her and John's deteriorating health changed all that, and in September of '95 she decided to sell her little piece of Eden and move to a house John owns in Eureka to be closer to the doctors and pay some of the bills.

Lynette and John, like many people these days, want to leave their land in the hands of people who will care for it, nourish it. With great care they finally picked the realtor to list Lynette's property. Chris Brannon of Garberville's Madrone Realty won the contract because of his alleged environmentalist credentials, the key word being alleged. Brannon displays a large Earth Flag over his office and has planted trees around Garberville, a wise business decision indeed in the birthplace of Redwood Summer. Brannon talked the talk with John and Lynette but his subsequent actions revealed it to be just that: talk. John now realizes he was naive to be taken in by Brannon. He now laments, "This sounds corny to me now. I thought he was an environmentalist. That is the reason we picked him to list the property. The first conversation with him was about what the restrictions on any sales were to be — that if someone was a logger, or was to provide access for logging or commercial development like these five-acre subdivisions, we weren't going to sell to anyone who was going to do that. Unfortunately, we're too trusting of people; it wasn't put in writing."

Chris Brannon toured Lynette's property with John and they talked about the benefits of logging. John made it clear that neither he nor Lynette were against sustained yield logging but were adamantly opposed to clearcutting. "Brannon represented himself as an environmental person," said John. "I thought I knew him, that he was a friend. It was only later I found out he hangs out with John Campbell (manager of Pacific Lumber under corporate raider Charles Hurwitz) and people like that. Brannon is basically a politician on the rise."

Lynette wanted $160,000 for her 47-acres, but Brannon insisted $90,000 was the most she could get, and that's the figure he listed it at, despite John and Lynette's protests. They had quite a few offers, all substantially less than the fire sale $90,000 listing, as people sought to take advantage of the seller's ill health.

February 12, 1996 John first heard the name Doyle Lancaster. He was taking a shower when Chris Brannon stuck his head in the bathroom window of the house John shares with Lynette on her 47 acres. Brannon announced, "I've got $70,000 cash for Lynette's land." John was annoyed not only by the intrusion on his privacy but by the ridiculously low offer. John told the realtor that Lynette would never go for it, but Brannon was insistent, saying, "Well, run it by her. It's cash. You'll have it in ten days." Brannon said the buyer's name was Doyle Lancaster and that he "wanted to build a homestead for his family."

Over the next week Chris Brannon kept up the pressure. "He was literally beating our door down," said John, who finally agreed to stop by Brannon's office to talk about it. "Brannon got Gladys Lancaster, Doyle's wife on the phone and they started negotiating. They were badgering me. I didn't feel comfortable with the situation and should have just walked out the door but I didn't. I stayed there and talked to them. Chris wanted me to sign a tentative agreement on a price and take it up to Lynette and show it to her. I did sign this paper but I didn't realize that their whole angle was to try to get anyone's signature on anything so they could try and close the deal, even without Lynette. So I signed the paper and said, 'I'm not really the owner; you have to get the owner to sign this.' Brannon knew this, that Lynette was the sole owner of the property. He had looked it up on the tax assessor's microfilm the first day when we listed the property. I was there and saw him do it. It says Lynette Hulsey, a single woman, sole owner. So he knew from day one. Later on he claimed not to have known that and denied ever talking to us about not logging or developing the land."

After signing the tentative agreement on price, John moved on to a doctor's appointment and then went back to check on Lynette. She was showing all the signs of having had a stroke in his absence. John rushed her down to the emergency room at Redwood Rural Health Center. While the couple was there, Chris Brannon walked in and announced for all to hear, "You're rich! You'll have $70,000 in a few days and $15,000 later." John was dumbfounded that Brannon would announce their business not only in public but in a place where Lynette had been taken because she was ill. "Wait a minute," John objected, "You can't do that. Lynette has to review the offer and sign off on it. It's her property, not mine." Brannon informed John the deal was in escrow and then asked, as if John were a co-conspirator, "Do you think we'll have a problem getting her signature?"

That night John told Lynette all that had transpired. As sick as she was Lynette was furious, as was John. The next day they wrote a letter to Brannon to put him on notice that the deal wasn't going to happen because Lynette hadn't agreed to it, and would never agree to any deal without a timber clause to prevent the land being clearcut. Up to this point the couple still thought Doyle Lancaster to be just as Brannon had represented him — a family man looking for a place to homestead. But something John remembered Brannon saying, that Lancaster had to go to a road meeting in the McCoy Creek area, stuck in John's mind. If Lancaster wanted to homestead Lynette's property why was he building roads in McCoy Creek? John started asking around and soon discovered Doyle Lancaster to be one of the most notorious anti-environment gyppo loggers in Mendocino and Humboldt Counties. Lancaster was clearcutting 200 acres of virgin fir in the headwaters of McCoy Creek, right to the water's edge, and the whole neighborhood was up in arms about it. "I had it confirmed that not only was Lancaster a logger," said John, "he was a bad logger at that. Everyone was upset with him, even other loggers. A logger I'm friendly with told me Lancaster's cuts leave not even a blade of grass standing. This was from another logger and he was sickened by it."

Doyle Lancaster, with the help of Chris Brannon, unsuccessfully sued John and Lynette for breach of contract. The litigation lasted over a year, being delayed numerous times because of John and Lynette's deteriorating health. During the trial Lancaster's lawyers accused the pair of faking their well documented health problems. Madrone Realty's Chris Brannon also jumped on the blame-the-victims bandwagon, one time telling John, "Lancaster doesn't care about your health problems, he doesn't care if it kills you both."

"That is probably the first true thing Chris Brannon has said to me," said John Hockett, adding that Brannon has been slandering him, calling him an "environmentalist phony".

But it got a lot worse than slander real fast.

Next week: What John Hockett and Lynette Hulsey found during the discovery phase of their trial; Lancaster's intimidation tactics and the strong possibility of a Pacific Lumber/Judi Bari bombing tie-in.

Lawsuits can lead to many unexpected places — not just for the person being sued, but for those suing. The civil suit brought by gyppo logger Doyle Lancaster, with the help of Garberville realtor Chris Brannan, against Lynette Hulsey and John Hockett for breach of contract has led many places, from the top management of Pacific Lumber Company to the nether world of white supremacists and neo-Nazis. You could say that Lancaster's unsuccessful lawsuit against Hulsey and Hockett ended in the sewer. You would be just as correct to say it started there.

The court trial was scheduled for February of this year, Judge Conrad Cox presiding in Mendocino County's Superior Court. Hockett and Hulsey acted as their own attorneys, going up against the Lancaster's Tom Becker of the Harland Law Firm, a high-powered Eureka outfit that often represents the Pacific Lumber Company. It wasn't until a week before trial that Hockett and Hulsey secured the services of Jamie Rose of Eureka, making their year-long struggle for discovery, interrogatories and pretrial motions all the more remarkable in that they did it themselves as lay people, in pro per, against an experienced attorney backed up by a law firm and corporate money.

In December of 1996, Hockett and Hulsey, through the discovery process, obtained a document from Fidelity National Title addressed to John Warren of the Harland Law Firm that showed that Doyle and Gladys Lancaster had acquired three properties immediately adjacent to Hulsey's land outside Piercy in northern Mendocino County in June of 1996. The Lancasters had sold the three properties to Pacific Lumber for a total of $911,000 through a complicated double escrow with Pacific Lumber as guarantor of Lancaster's loans. (Lancaster declared bankruptcy in 1991 to escape a judgment for a fuel oil spill on Lost Man Creek. He has made a remarkable comeback.) Lancaster was also the front for the attempt to purchase of Hulsey's land, again with a double escrow, that would convey title to Pacific Lumber. Lancaster was also trying to buy 1200 acres over the ridge behind Hulsey's property, but when she and Hockett caught on to the PL/Lancaster scheme that deal fell apart. Hulsey and Hockett refused to sell.

Hulsey's 47 acres lies in the path to the more than 2,000 acres of heavily timbered land Pacific Lumber is trying to acquire through Lancaster's ruse of wanting the land to establish "a homestead for his family." This is what Lancaster testified to in court, under oath, adding he wanted Hulsey's land to "build his dream house." Yet five days earlier Lancaster, through his lawyer Tom Becker, offered to drop the lawsuit if Hulsey would give him unlimited access for logging through her property. The only road to the timber behind Hulsey and Hockett's place runs through Hulsey's property, and although the parcels behind Hulsey's have deeded access it is for personal ingress and egress only, not for commercial purposes. Pacific Lumber and Doyle Lancaster cannot haul out the timber on the lush 2,000 acres without Lynette Hulsey's permission — permission she would never grant for the kind of rape and pillage logging Doyle Lancaster is infamous for. Lancaster had already clearcut 40 acres near Hulsey's property last year, hauling out more than 200 loads of logs out over Hockett's and Hulsey's road, tearing it up and cutting their waterline in the process. Recalls Hockett, "We were going to sue him for trespassing, but he had already hauled them all out. It's after the fact and the damage is done."

Pacific Lumber Company listed John Snead, Rick Gromer and PL General Manager John Campbell as the PL executives involved in the Lancaster deal but refused to provide the actual contracts, saying in a letter to Hockett's and Hulsey's attorney Rose, "The actual contracts with Pacific Lumber Company regarding this information is proprietary and confidential. While the Lancasters have negotiated with Pacific Lumber Company, the Lancasters do not have any documents signed by Pacific Lumber Company."

But Doyle Lancaster's plans for the 1200 acres apparently went far beyond buying them for Pacific Lumber so he could have the contract to log them. John Hockett claims to have had a map showing a subdivision Lancaster was planning for the 1200 acres. That map never made it to court; it was stolen just as the trial was to get under way.

On January 28, 1997, John Hockett sent his son up to Hulsey's property to get the map and other documents needed for trial. By this time Hockett and Hulsey had moved out of their idyllic homestead above Piercy out of concern for their safety. They had stored most of their possessions in a barn and storage container on Hulsey's property. On his errand to retrieve the map of Lancaster's proposed subdivision, Hockett's son discovered that the side of the barn had been smashed in and that two safes containing the maps and documents were gone. The storage container also had been broken into; what the thieves didn't take they destroyed. A piano and desk lay exposed to the winter rains, maliciously broken up almost beyond recognition. Hockett's extensive art collection was ground into the mud, jewelry cases lie broken and crumpled (Hockett and Hulsey are jewelers), and their personal belongings were strewn all about. All the documents relating to the court case, including the map stored there, were gone, as were over 2,000 items of value. The bold thefts and gratuitous destruction of their property shocked and frightened Hockett and Hulsey.

Hockett and Hulsey immediately called the Mendocino County Sheriff Department, but it was a week before a deputy showed up to take their report. Meanwhile their trial with Doyle Lancaster had started.

Doyle Lancaster, the clan's patriarch, testified that he had been a logger for 40 years and that he was in the business of buying land, logging it, and then selling it. But, Lancaster said, his purpose for attempting to buy Hulsey's land was to build his dream house. He testified that he had no other purpose in mind for the property. Hockett and Hulsey of course couldn't produce the stolen map showing Lancaster's subdivision plans — plans that hinged on acquiring Hulsey's 47 acres — and Lancaster won that point although he lost the suit. Judge Cox ruled that Hulsey was the sole owner of the property and that even though Hockett had signed a tentative offer to sell the property he was not acting as Hulsey's agent. Hulsey had to sign the contract herself and she hadn't. End of case. Lancaster's attorney immediately filed to vacate the judgment and this time Judge Cox refused with a terse one-line denial. Lancaster is expected to appeal.

Eventually Mendocino County Sheriff Deputy Joey DeMarco called Hockett and Hulsey, hopelessly lost trying to find the property. Hockett offered to meet the deputy to lead him up to the hill but the deputy refused, wanting only directions. Hockett was a little upset at the deputy's bullheadedness, afraid he would get lost again and give up, and since Hockett wasn't feeling well that day, called a neighbor to drive down the hill and meet the deputy coming up. The neighbor found Deputy DeMarco talking to four people at the bottom of Hulsey's property who were identified as Max Lennons, Jennifer Polacek, Kim Shaeffer and Peter Van Cleese. None of the four was known to Hockett and Hulsey at the time and were in fact trespassing on the Hulsey property when Deputy DeMarco discovered them.

These four persons become central to the break-in and theft at Hockett and Hulsey's barn.

John Hockett and Deputy DeMarco finally hooked up and, together, they went up to the scene of the crime. Hockett picks up the story:

"One of the things that really irritated me about DeMarco was that there was a boot print, a logging-type boot print, in the mud. I showed it to him and he intentionally stepped right on it, destroying the evidence. I wasn't too thrilled about him investigating the case after that. He then went upstairs to the loft of the barn, it had been totally ransacked, and he found a sleeping bag laying on an old couch. DeMarco said it looked like a homeless person had been staying there and that most likely a homeless person had ripped us off. Like a homeless person had packed off three U-Haul truckloads of stuff — that's what we had in there — and two very large safes. One safe weighed 2,000 pounds, the other 8,000 pounds. DeMarco thought a homeless person was going to haul off 10,000 pounds of iron! That was his theory. There were two sets of dual tire tracks that could still be seen — it had been raining — and the side of the barn had been smashed in and the safes removed, they didn't even bother to break down the doors. It was obvious heavy equipment was used and Lancaster had a crew working just up the road. DeMarco didn't seem interested, and I don't know if he ever did go up to talk to Lancaster and his crew.

"A couple of days later DeMarco called me and said there wasn't much he could do about the case but that he would check it out. I asked about his report and he told me 'my report's done.'

"I then put out a flyer. I told the Sheriff's department, if you're not going to investigate this I would. I offered a $2,500 reward and listed some of the stolen property, along with Deputy DeMarco's name and number as the investigating officer and my name and number. Maybe the flyer was a bad idea, I don't know, but it worked. DeMarco sure thought it was a bad idea. He called me up at 10:30 at night and raked me over the coals about it. 'How could you publish my name in a flyer?' DeMarco demanded. 'You can't do that; it's against policy. I don't want these criminals coming after me.' I told DeMarco he was in the wrong line of work if he was worried about criminals coming after him. First he said it was a homeless person packing our stuff off in a backpack and now it's criminals and I had endangered him. He was really nasty, not nice about it at all. I told him no one had told me not to put out wanted posters. He was furious. He said I blew it and that my case was over and I'd never hear anything."

It is against policy for Sheriff's deputies to be associated with rewards, unless of course it's the Governor offering them, as was the case with Bear Lincoln. The less than intrepid deputy DeMarco was unavailable for comment before press deadline.

The next day an anonymous caller took Hockett up on the reward offer. A code number was arranged so the tipster could identify himself among other potential tipsters. Over the next three days, Hockett learned that stolen safes were at the Orbin Lumber Company mill in Carlotta, right across the road from Pacific Lumber's Carlotta mill. The anonymous caller also identified one Marc Broussard as one of the persons responsible for the thefts. During this time the Mendocino County Sheriff's Department pulled deputy DeMarco off the case at Hockett's insistence and assigned detective Darrel Forester, an experienced investigator. Hockett advised Forester of the tip off as to the whereabouts of the stolen safes and asked the detective to accompany him to the Carlotta mill. "At least with Forester he called me back," said Hockett. "He was truly interested in the case but couldn't tell me when he would be able to go to Carlotta with me. So I went alone."

At the Orbin Lumber Company mill Hockett found his two safes, battered almost beyond recognition with their doors gone. The safes had been picked up with a crane and repeatedly dropped onto a concrete slab and cut open with a blowtorch. Hockett left and called the Sheriff's departments of both Mendocino and Humboldt County, but could not get a commitment to get a deputy to go to the mill with him, so the next day he returned, again alone.

Hockett didn't seem to realize at this point how dangerous a set of thieves and thugs he'd stumbled upon.

Hockett got there just in time. Workers were preparing to move the safes, to recycle them for scrap, they said. Hockett identified himself and told the workers the safes were stolen property, evidence in a crime, and not to touch them. The reaction of most the mill workers was hostile. "They told me I was trespassing and threatened my life," said Hockett. "A man identified himself as Shannon Ewonsky and said he was in charge of the mill, the foreman. He told me to get the hell out of there right now, that I could be shot for coming around there." Hockett stood his ground, reiterating they were his safes and evidence in a crime. Ewonsky became sarcastic, asking Hockett "What are those safes made out of?" "They seemed to know a lot more then they were admitting," remembers Hockett. "I asked Ewonsky if he knew Lancaster or Broussard and he denied knowing them, but a couple of workers said they knew Broussard and that he was in jail." As Hockett was leaving another worker told him privately that a man named Max Lennons had been coming around the mill a lot and burning papers in the teepee burner.

Hockett came back again the next day, this time with Garberville Private Investigator Gary Holder, and took pictures of the battered safes. Ewonsky remained hostile, refusing to give his name to the investigator, but again the name Max Lennons came up. Hockett and Holder asked around in town about Lennons and soon discovered what Holder already knew from his years as a Humboldt County Sheriff's Deputy: that Lennons had quite a reputation as a thief and all-round thug. A woman told them she was sure Lennons had burglarized her house and to drive up the road and "look for the mark of the beast."

At 6662 Rohnerville Road a sign on the gate read, "If you come in here, you will have to deal with Max Lennons, and you will be dealt with harshly." At the home they found Jennifer Polacek, a young girl of 18 who looked as if she had been recently beaten up. Polacek denied Lennons was home but she did give Hockett and the PI Lennons' phone number.

Back when deputy DeMarco first came out to take a report of the burglary on the Hockett-Hulsey property, he encountered four people trespassing on Hulsey's land: Max Lennons, Jennifer Polacek, Kim Shaeffer and a man who identified himself as Peter Van Cleese. But Peter Van Cleese is a Humboldt County Probation Officer and definitely was not there that day. Van Cleese has one probationer in Mendocino County, David Lancaster, son of Doyle. (Long-time AVA readers will recall that David Lancaster is the heroic young man who in 1989 punched 50 year old Mem Hill in the nose at an Earth First! demonstration at a Lancaster logging job in Whitethorn.

David Lancaster was in his early 20s at the time and his punch broke Mem Hill's nose. The Mendocino authorities refused to prosecute Lancaster, but Hill successfully sued and recovered civil damages from Lancaster.)

When Hockett and Hulsey's barn was broken into only two other people, to their knowledge, knew of the barn's contents: Chris Brannan the realtor and Doyle Lancaster, the would-be buyer.

Armed with Max Lennons' phone number, John Hockett began repeatedly calling Lennons. After a week of trying, Lennons finally agreed to talk to Hockett. The first thing Hockett asked was if Lennons knew Dave Lancaster. Lennons told Hockett that the Lancasters were his good friends and that he had worked for them for years. Hockett told Lennons if he were just to return the stolen property the police wouldn't be involved and he would let the matter drop. Lennons said he would think about it and get back to Hockett. A few days later Lennons called to say he would return some of the stolen property but that he wanted to do a dry run first and asked Hockett to meet him on the Avenue of the Giants, halfway between Eureka and Garberville. Hockett refused. He knew through a friend that Lennons had been in the Garberville area asking about him and he smelled a trap. That same day a worker from the Orbin Mill called to say Max Lennons, Marc Broussard and mill foreman Shannon Ewonsky were the ones who had used the mill crane to break open the safes, dropping them over 30 times onto the concrete. He said another man, Randy Lyons, was also present when the safes were finally busted open.

Hockett talked to Lennons a few more times over the next two days, trying to arrange the safe return of his and Hulsey's property, but then Lennons was arrested on an unrelated warrant.

The department of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms has raided Lennons home in the past and had discovered what they described as a bomb factory that included dynamite, blasting caps, fuses, and chemicals used to manufacture explosives. Lennons has a long criminal history that includes weapons, thefts and explosives convictions.

Hockett took advantage of Lennons' arrest to return to Lennons' house with yet another PI. This time Jennifer Polacek agreed to let them look around the yard though she denied them permission to enter the house. There in plain sight Hockett found a lunch box his mother had given him when he was just out of school and starting his working life. On the handle was engraved JOHN HO. Hockett explained he was late for work when his mother was putting his name on the new lunch box all those years ago and his mother had never gotten around to finishing the job of spelling out Hockett.

Hockett called the Humboldt County Sheriff's Department. They immediately dispatched a deputy to guard the site until a search warrant could be obtained. Eight hours later, armed with a warrant, Hockett and the Humboldt County authorities entered Max Lennons' house. During a four and a half hour search they recovered 200 items belonging to Hockett and Hulsey, about one tenth of the property boldly stolen from them. Throughout the house was Nazi paraphernalia, including a large flag featuring a swastika beneath which was a kind of shrine containing seven photos bracketed by skulls festooned with Nazi emblems. A deputy identified the persons in the pictures to Hockett as being Lennons' partners in crime. The seven were Dave Fontaine, Marc Broussard, Max Lennons, Jennifer Polacek, Kim Shaeffer, George Brooks Jr and Randy Lyons. Throughout the house, on walls and tables and stacked in boxes, were hundreds of photos of Lennons and his cohorts in various logging scenes posed with giant old growth redwood trees. There were also boxes of newspaper clippings, flyers and pictures of Judi Bari and Barth First!, including many articles about the bombing of Bari and Darryl Cherney in Oakland on May 24, 1990.

While the police and Hockett were searching Lennons' house, Dave Fontaine of Nazi shrine fame called. "The sheriffs actually seemed afraid of him," Hockett says. "I could see fear in the deputies' eyes." The deputies warned Hockett that while Max Lennons was a pretty crazy guy, Dave Fontaine was truly dangerous. "Don't talk to that guy and never turn your back on him," was how a deputy put it to Hockett.

Dave Fontaine is known around Humboldt County as a militant white supremacist who answers to the name of "Ghost." People have since warned Hockett that "Ghost" is looking to "blow him away," and on at least two occasions Hockett has spotted Fontaine following him. Hockett says he has also been trailed by Doyle Lancaster.

The day after the March search of Lennons' house, Dave "Ghost" Fontaine was observed by Hockett removing boxes of photographs. "Ghost looked at me like, 'I'm going to kill you.' That's the only way I could describe it," said Hockett. "I took it very seriously."

Max Lennons and Marc Broussard are in jail on grand theft and receiving stolen property charges as well as weapons charges. None of the others, including Shannon Ewonsky, have been charged. All are believed to have ties to the white supremacist/Christian identity movement — and possibly the Aryan Nations — and are believed to be involved in the methamphetamine trade.

In a related development, David Roberts of Myers Flat was arrested on March 20, 1997, in the company of two Mexican nationals, Francisco Alvarez and Rafael Mendoza, by agents of the Drug Enforcement Administration. Roberts, a former Phoenix, Arizona, police officer, is believed to be the major distributor of crank for the Mexican Mafia in Northern California. Besides the four pounds of methamphetamine found by the agents at Roberts' place in Myers Flat were some of John Hockett and Lynette Hulsey's stolen property. The Aryan Brotherhood, a California prison gang with close ties to the Aryan Nations, is known to act as enforcers for the Mexican Mafia and have been implicated in a number of unsolved murders in the Pacific Northwest. ¶

Date of transcription 6/4/90

On May 31, 1990, Senator BARRY KEENE, Senate Majority Leader, California State Senate, Second District, 313 State Capitol, Sacramento, California, was interviewed by Special Agents [redacted] and [redacted] of the Sacramento Office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). The identities of the interviewing agents were immediately made known to Senator KEENE. The purpose for the interview was previously known to Senator KEENE.

Present during the entire interview was TONY BEARD, JR., Senate Chief Sergeant-at-Arms. Also present during a portion of the interview was [redacted] for Senator KEENE. [redacted] furnished information during part of the interview and this information is attributed to him.

Senator KEENE advised that his [redacted] [redacted] on May 24, 1990, at approximately 5:15 p.m., was the recipient of a telephone call from a female who called the Senate Office on the public telephone line. [redacted] advised that when the phone call was received by another employee, he agreed to speak with the caller. [redacted] stated the female identified herself as [redacted] (phonetic) and she spoke in a hysterical manner, using profanity, and made reference to the timber companies having bought out the Senator. The caller stated to the effect, "People are getting killed and hurt. Senator KEENE better stop his bill". The caller said she was calling in regard to the bombing in Oakland and wanted to know what happened down there. She stated to the effect, "Better cut this fucking stuff out". The caller did not mention a specific group but did mention the names JUDY BARI and DARRYL CHERNEY.

[redacted] advised that the caller spoke as if she was on the verge of hysteria and did not seem to be able to get the words out as fast as she was thinking. It was also [redacted] impression that the caller's use of obscenities was not natural to her.

Senator KEENE advised that approximately two or three weeks earlier he had received a telephone call from an unknown male on his private, unpublished line located at his Sacramento residence. This number is only known to 20 or 30 friends. Senator KEENE said the call was received during the early morning hours when he was still asleep. Senator KEENE noted that this incident occurred about one week after there had been considerable news media coverage regarding the breakdown of the negotiations of the logging issue.

Senator KEENE advised that the caller spoke with an educated but nervous type voice that had a bit of a shrillness to it. The caller said, "Senator, Senator, you better stop fucking around." Senator KEENE asked the caller what he meant and the caller replied, "You know what I mean. You like to cut trees, maybe we should take an ax to your limbs. Just keep it in mind, Senator." The caller then hung up. Senator KEENE advised he had no idea of who was responsible for the telephone call.

Senator KEENE advised that some time around April 17 or 18, 1990, his Vallejo office received in the normal mail a typed news release dated April 13, 1990, from the environmental group "Earth First". This new release contained a printed note to "BARRY KEENE" wanting to know if he was going to do something about this, referring to the Earth First message. Senator KEENE advised he had no idea as to the identity of the person responsible. He added that the envelope the letter came in was discarded by his office in Vallejo. (A copy of the news release is attached to this document.)

Senator KEENE was apprised of the FBI's jurisdiction in matters of this nature and of the opinion of the Assistant U.S. Attorney. He was requested to promptly advise the FBI should he receive threatening telephone calls or mail that could possibly be a violation of federal law.

Earth First gets set for lawsuit filed against FBI

Oakland police also defendants

By Josh Richman
STAFF WRITER

OAKLAND — Activists partied while establishing a downtown beachhead Monday, preparing a base of operations for the upcoming federal trial of a lawsuit brought by two Earth First leaders hurt in a 1990 bombing in Oakland.

The lawsuit Darryl Cherney and the late Judi Bari filed against the FBI and the Oakland Police long has been a progressive cause celebre, but since Sept. 11 it has also become a rallying point for activists angered by governmental intrusion upon civil liberties in the name of security.

And so Cherney stood amid a flurry of computer-assembling and furniture-moving Monday in an office suite overlooking the confluence of Telegraph Avenue and Broadway, as fellow activists arrived with food and drink for a bring-a-dish "office warming party."

The trial was set for last fall, but after Sept. 11, both sides agreed they couldn't empanel an unbiased jury for a bombing case. It is scheduled to begin April 8 before U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken of Oakland.

"Now I think the trial is more important than ever," said Cherney, wearing a black beret and sipping a beer while directing Monday's move-in. "The Bush administration has launched a full-scale assault on civil liberties. In a sense, this case constitutes a giant speed bump placed in the way of the FBI steamroller running over our civil rights."

In 1990, Bari and Cherney were planning a "Redwood Summer" to protest Northern California logging. Earth First by then had been accused of "eco-terrorism" such as placing spikes in tree trunks to prevent logging — sabotage that can hurt or kill loggers — and Bari and other Earth First activists had received death threats.

They were in Oakland for a planning session when a bomb exploded in their station wagon on Park Boulevard. Bari suffered a shattered pelvis and other injuries; Cherney was treated for minor wounds. Oakland Police and federal agents investigated and within a day arrested Bari and Cherney for possessing and transporting a bomb, but Alameda County prosecutors declined to charge Bari and Cherney, citing insufficient evidence.

Bari and Cherney in 1991 sued Oakland, its police, the FBI, and other Northern California police agencies and investigators whom they claimed had illegally arrested them and searched their homes, conspiring to frame them in order to quash environmental activism.

Bari died of cancer in 1997, but pictures of her were posted Monday throughout a rented office suite not far from the courthouse where the case will be tried. Earth First flags and news clippings also dotted the walls, as a video of Bari played on a television screen and songs blared from a boom box.

"This is kind of like old home week," said Tracy Katelman of Petrolia, a longtime friend of Bari and Cherney. "I haven't been involved in Earth First in 10 years, but I'm involved now because it's a justice issue — what happened just isn't right."

East Bay resident Karen Pickett agreed. "Now is a time for people to get clear on what their civil rights are," she said, adding Bari from the start saw this lawsuit as a bigger issue of exposing government's encroachment on free political expression. "It's about all those other people, all those other parts of our movement. Now is the time for solidarity."

The trial is scheduled to last six weeks, with up to about 100 potential witnesses. Cherney is eager.

"The FBI needs to eat some humble pie," he said.

Judge raps attorney for FBI query

Earth First defense rebuked for forbidden COINTELPRO queries

By Josh Richman
STAFF WRITER

OAKLAND — An attorney for Earth First activists Darryl Cherney and the late Judi Bari got a stern dressing-down from a federal judge Tuesday after trying to elicit testimony about the FBI's alleged work against political groups.

The activists have sued three current or former Oakland Police officers and six current or former FBI agents, who they claim tried to frame them for knowingly possessing a bomb, which exploded in their car May 24, 1990 in Oakland.

Retired Oakland Police Sgt. Michael Sitterud — a defendant — was almost done testifying Tuesday when attorney Dennis Cunningham asked whether he had considered the FBI's investigative reputation when he believed agents' information on Earth First, the anti-logging environmental group for which Cherney and Bari were lead organizers.

Sitterud replied he had, and Cunningham asked whether Sitterud knew of the FBI's activities against political groups. U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken interrupted before Sitterud could answer, telling Cunningham his question was out of bounds.

"You may sit down," Wilken forcefully said twice, as Cunningham tried to protest.

Wilken later reprimanded Cunningham while the jury was gone for a recess. Long before the trial began last week, the judge specifically forbade testimony or evidence about any FBI counterintelligence activities against political groups.

"I don't want to hear any more questions like that, do you understand me?" Wilken asked Cunningham, who acknowledged the rebuke.

The plaintiffs long have claimed the FBI's COINTELPRO, an acronym for "counterintelligence programs," is key to this case. They believe the FBI's practice of gathering information about or infiltrating domestic political dissident groups was the context in which the bureau tried to discredit and disrupt Earth First by framing Bari and Cherney as eco-terrorists who knowingly transported the bomb that hurt them.

Wilken told Cunningham on Tuesday that if he believes a witnesses' testimony has opened the door to such questions, he must wait for a recess and ask Wilken's permission before pursuing it.

Another spat erupted Tuesday when Oakland Deputy City Attorney Maria Bee, the Oakland officers' legal counsel, asked Sitterud about a plastic pipe nipple — a short length of pipe with threads at both ends — and metal end-caps found in Cherney's van hours after the bomb blast. Wilken overruled Cunningham's objection to the question, and Sitterud said he saw those objects as "very significant" because they seemed similar to components of the bomb.

During a later recess, Cunningham and co-counsels J. Tony Serra and Robert Bloom complained Bee had violated a pretrial order barring mention of a "road-spiking kit," meant for damaging vehicles, found in Cherney's van.

Wilken noted Bee didn't identify the pipe nipple and end-caps as parts of a road-spiking kit, but the plaintiffs' lawyers complained jurors were left with the impression the objects could've been bomb-making materials. The judge ordered Bee and U.S. Justice Department attorney R. Joseph Sher, the FBI defendants' lawyer, to see about bringing those objects to court for examination to settle the dispute.

Oakland Police Sgt. Robert Chenault — Sitterud's partner in 1990 — began testifying Tuesday about the day of the blast. He said he saw Bari and Cherney arrive at Highland Hospital for treatment of their injuries. He said he then met Sitterud at the Park Boulevard explosion scene.

He then helped search the home of the activists' associate and returned to police headquarters to question witnesses and meet with FBI agents.

Bloom's questions seemed aimed at showing how police and agents rushed to judgment in arresting Bari and Cherney despite weak evidence. Chenault's testimony continues today.

Jurors examine bombed car

Lawsuit says activists were wrongly viewed as suspects

By Jim Herron Zamora
CHRONICLE STAFF WRITER

The jury in a federal civil rights trial yesterday looked at the bombed-out station wagon driven by two Earth First activists who said they were wrongly suspected by FBI investigators and Oakland police.

Under the watchful eyes of federal marshals, U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken and attorneys on both sides, the 12 jurors spent about 15 minutes in a downtown Oakland parking lot peering at the rusted white Subaru that Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney were riding in when a pipe bomb exploded on May 24, 1990.

The suit, filed jointly by Cherney and Bari before she died of cancer in 1997, contends that investigators ignored crime scene evidence in a rush to accuse the two of carrying a bomb that detonated prematurely. Both Cherney and Bari were injured in the blast.

Investigators initially stated that the activists must have known about the bomb because the nail-wrapped explosive was in plain view on the floor of the back seat.

FBI experts later determined that the bomb was actually concealed under the driver's seat — based on the pattern of the explosion, which blew a huge hole under the seat — and may have been placed there to kill or injure Bari.

Jurors also compared the metal hulk to an intact Subaru of the same model and year.

"This is the most obvious proof that the FBI and Oakland (police) were lying," attorney J. Tony Serra, who represents the plaintiffs in the case, said in an interview after jurors examined the car. "It's obvious even to a nonexpert that the bomb was under the seat."

The lawsuit, filed in 1991, accuses nine investigators from FBI and Oakland police of illegal search and seizure, false arrest and violating Bari's and Cherney's First Amendment rights.

Investigators almost immediately began focusing on Bari and Cherney as suspects instead of victims. Both were arrested the day of the blast but were never charged with a crime.

Yesterday, two Oakland police investigators testified that they deferred to the judgment of FBI bomb expert Frank Doyle in determining that Bari and Cherney were suspects.

Sgt. Robert Chenault, who is named in the suit, conceded that initial assumptions by investigators proved incorrect, including placement of the bomb and the conclusion that round-headed nails used in the bomb were the same as flat-headed nails found separately in a bag in Bari's car.

Chenault, who drafted the initial search warrant application with Doyle, said he relied heavily on the FBI's expertise in bombings and terrorism in the decision to view Cherney and Bari as suspects.

In other testimony yesterday, Myron Hanson, who retired from the Oakland Police Department earlier this year, said he barely glanced at the station wagon after arriving on the scene.

Hanson, a sergeant on the arson/bombing unit at the time, said he was busy collecting evidence other than the vehicle. He said he deferred to the judgment of Doyle, who was his instructor at bomb school.

Hanson said he did not remember why authorities considered the two to be suspects, nor who made the decision. He said he could recall little of a meeting he attended several hours after the bombing with FBI investigators and Oakland police.

Jury examines Earth First car

Judge leads inspection of vehicle bombed in 1990

By Josh Richman
STAFF WRITER

OAKLAND — A federal judge and jury solemnly inspected the twisted wreck of a car in which Earth First activists Darryl Cherney and the late Judi Bari were riding when a bomb exploded in May 1990.

The nine-woman, three-man jury and the judge walked two blocks from the federal courthouse to make a slow circuit around the battered Subaru station wagon, taking turns leaning in for long gazes at the gaping hole in the floorboards. They also viewed pieces of Bari's driver's seat and, for comparison, an intact Subaru wagon of the same model and year.

"This here is enough to win the case," J. Tony Serra, one of Cherney's and Bari's attorneys, said out of jurors' earshot. "For plaintiffs, it's one of the most important elements of the trial because it gives a raw edge to the reality of the explosion."

The estate of Bari, who died of cancer in 1997, and Cherney have sued three current or former Oakland police officers and six current or former FBI agents who they claim tried to discredit and disrupt Earth First by framing them as eco-terrorists who were knowingly transporting the bomb when it went off accidentally.

The police and federal agents — including Oakland police Sgt. Robert Chenault, who was on the witness stand Wednesday — contend information they had about Earth First, evidence from the bombing and witnesses' statements supported the arrest and search warrants issued for Bari and Cherney within hours of the blast. Prosecutors later declined to file charges against the activists.

Bomb placement

A key dispute concerns where the bomb was when it exploded. The police and agents say they believed it was on the rear floorboards and in plain view, meaning Bari and Cherney were knowingly transporting it.

But Serra, standing near the car Wednesday in a parking lot at 15th and Jefferson streets, said the damage clearly indicates the bomb was farther forward, hidden beneath Bari's seat.

R. Joseph Sher, the U.S. Justice Department attorney defending the FBI agents, declined any comment as jurors examined the car.

Earlier Wednesday, Chenault testified he believed the hole in the car was consistent with the conclusion of FBI Special Agent Frank Doyle — a bomb expert, and another defendant — that the bomb was on the rear floorboards in plain view.

"Even Ray Charles could see" it was inconsistent, said plaintiffs' attorney Robert Bloom, drawing an objection from Sher which U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken sustained.

Bloom's questions focused on the information Chenault included in an affidavit supporting the warrants to search Bari's and Cherney's homes.

Chenault testified he included as much relevant information as he could remember, but Bloom sought to imply Chenault had omitted elements that could have helped exonerate Bari and Cherney.

"You lied to the judge, you deceived her, didn't you?" Bloom accused at one point, drawing another sustained objection.

Nails different

Chenault had included in the affidavit Doyle's assertion that nails placed in the bomb as shrapnel matched nails in a bag found elsewhere in the car. But when Bloom showed Chenault and jurors photos of the finishing nails from the bomb and the roofing nails from the bag, Chenault acknowledged they were obviously different.

"I never personally inspected or viewed those nails," he said, later explaining Doyle provided the affidavit's information about the nails and the bomb's position.

Explosives expert

"Agent Doyle struck me as being a well-versed expert in bomb investigations — I relied on him. . . . I had no information or reason to disbelieve his honesty or integrity."

Bloom later asked, "The FBI, with your help was going after the environmentalists, weren't they?" Wilken overruled an objection by Oakland Deputy City Attorney Maria Bee, counsel for the defendant officers.

"I wasn't in cahoots or helping anybody go after anybody," Chenault answered.

6 FBI in Earth First trial called dedicated

By Josh Richman
STAFF WRITER

OAKLAND — FBI agents and Oakland police who investigated the 1990 bomb blast that hurt Earth First activists Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney were devoted, responsible and fair public servants, their lawyers said Wednesday.

Trial of the activists' civil lawsuit began this week and will last until late May. The federal lawsuit accuses six current and former FBI agents and three current and former Oakland officers of falsely arresting the activists and illegally searching their homes in a deliberate attempt to frame them as terrorists who knowingly possessed the bomb, all in order to disrupt and discredit the Earth First environmental movement.

U.S. Justice Department attorney R. Joseph Sher made his opening statement Wednesday, introducing jurors to the six FBI defendants and explaining their roles in the investigation. He spoke of their family lives too, and for some, their interest in environmental protection.

"The FBI as an institution is not on trial here," Sher said. "There are six defendants, six people, six — I think the evidence will show — dedicated public servants."

Sher outlined how John Reikes, then supervisor of the FBI's San Francisco counter terrorism squad, coordinated investigators after a bomb exploded in the activists' car May 24, 1990, in Oakland; how Special Agent Frank Doyle, a veteran bomb expert, advised Oakland police; and how Special Agent Stockton Buck gathered and catalogued evidence.

Special Agent Phil Sena, who had probed a possible Earth First link to the April 1990 sabotage of Santa Cruz County power lines, shared information with Oakland police, Sher said. Special Agent John Conway was the bombing case's principal investigator, later replaced by Special Agent Walter Hemje. Hemje is a defendant but is absent from this trial on his doctor's orders.

The agents worked with no intent other than solving a crime, relying on their expertise, physical evidence, confidential informants and other information to build their case, Sher said.

Hours after the bombing, he noted, the agents and Oakland police called in Alameda County prosecutors to help draft search warrants for Bari's and Cherney's homes. One of those prosecutors, Thomas Orloff, is now Alameda County District Attorney and will be called to testify.

The evidence won't show the agents had hostility toward environmental protection, or that they conspired to suppress political speech, or that they gave Oakland police false information, Sher told jurors. Nor will it show Bari, Cherney and their supporters cooperated with investigators.

Oakland Deputy City Attorney Maria Bee introduced to the jury police Sgt. Robert Chenault, then in the homicide squad; former Oakland police Lt. Mike Sims, now a Tracy police captain; and former Oakland homicide Sgt. Mike Sitterud, now retired. She said they faced a huge, confusing crime scene unlike any they'd seen before, and relied upon the FBI's expertise and advice.

Bee said agents told the officers Earth First had a reputation for violence and sabotage, and interpreted evidence to mean the bomb had been in plain sight on the floor of the car's back seat. Some in the audience laughed derisively when Bee emphasized Bari and Cherney knew the blast had been caused by a bomb without being told so by police.

Alameda County prosecutors in July 1990 declined to charge Bari and Cherney with any crime. But Bee noted Tuesday that police need only a reasonable belief to seek arrest and search warrants, while prosecutors need proof beyond a reasonable doubt to file charges.

"Each and every decision the Oakland investigators made was reasonable and proper based on the information they'd developed and what they had been told in their investigation," Bee said.

The first witness called by the plaintiffs was Oakland firefighter Thomas Viers, who was among the first rescuers on the bombing scene; he described climbing into the shattered car's back seat to help Bari until paramedics arrived. His testimony was accompanied by still photographs and news video clips of the bombing scene.

EARTH FIRST'S DAY IN COURT Oakland car-bomb case pits activists against cops, FBI

About 200 protesters call for justice

By Josh Richman
 STAFF WRITER

OAKLAND — Jury selection began Monday for the trial of a lawsuit two environmental activists brought against FBI agents and Oakland police, who they claim framed them for a 1990 car bombing in which they were hurt.

As U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken began questioning 64 potential jurors, about 200 protesters gathered outside to call for justice in the case brought by Darryl Cherney and the late Judi Bari.

Opening statements could begin as early as today, and the trial is expected to last about eight weeks.

Lawyers spent some time Monday wrangling over wording of questions for potential jurors. U.S. Justice Department senior trial counsel R. Joseph Sher objected to a question regarding potential jurors' views of law enforcement in light of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, but plaintiffs' attorney J. Tony Serra said the patriotic, pro-police wave gripping the nation makes such a question fair game.

The question stayed in, and after the potential jurors had entered the courtroom, about six of them raised their hands to indicate their post-9/11 feelings about law enforcement might bias their judgment in this case.

The lawyers introduced their legal teams and read aloud their witness lists to ensure no juror would have any personal connections to the parties involved in this case. Dozens of witnesses — mostly FBI, Bay Area and Humboldt and Sonoma County law enforcement officers — might be called to testify, including Alameda County District Attorney Thomas Orloff.

In 1990, Bari and Cherney were planning a "Redwood Summer" to protest Northern California logging. The group they belonged to, Earth First, by then had been accused of "eco-terrorism" such as placing spikes in tree trunks to prevent logging — sabotage that can hurt or kill loggers — and Bari and other Earth First activists had received death threats.

They were in Oakland for a planning session when a bomb exploded May 24, 1990, in their station wagon on Park Boulevard. Bari suffered a shattered pelvis and other injuries; Cherney was treated for minor wounds. Oakland Police and federal agents investigated and within a day arrested Bari and Cherney for possessing and transporting a bomb, but Alameda County prosecutors in July 1990 declined to charge the two activists, citing insufficient evidence.

Bari and Cherney sued in 1991, claiming they were falsely arrested and their homes were illegally searched in violation of their Fourth Amendment rights. They also claim officers and agents conspired to frame them for the bombing to discredit and disrupt Earth First, a violation of their First Amendment right to political expression.

The lawsuit is seeking unspecified monetary damages and the clearing of their names as well as a promise that law enforcement agencies will try to find out who was responsible for the bombing.

Bari died of cancer in 1997 but her daughter, Lisa Bari, was in court Monday alongside Darlene Comingore, executor of Bari's estate.

Outside court Monday, music, banners, picket signs and protesters filled the Ronald V. Dellums Federal Building's Clay Street courtyard.

Two 12-foot-tall effigies bobbed through the crowd — one of Bari, her ubiquitous fiddle in hand, and another of Richard Held, who was special agent in charge of the FBI's San Francisco office at the time of the bombing. Held's effigy depicted him in black-and-white striped prison garb, a number on his back.

Several protesters' signs took verbal potshots at the FBI: "Forever Busting the Innocent," "Frame, Brutalize and Incarcerate" and "Fires, Bombing and Intimidation."

Cherney came out during a court recess, and said Bari was "like our Martin Luther King" — a great leader, spokesperson and strategist set upon by overwhelming foes. "Judi Bari worked harder on this case than anybody in the world, and she's with us in spirit today."

Earth First lawyer cites officer bias

Defense questions speed in Bari, Cherney 1990 bomb arrests

By Josh Richman
STAFF WRITER

OAKLAND — A former Oakland police sergeant told a federal jury Monday he relied on evidence and information largely provided by FBI agents in building a case against two Earth First activists hurt in a 1990 bomb blast.

"We were very sincere in our efforts," Michael Sitterud testified. "We had a lot of information about them. It looked like a good case to me — it looked like their bomb."

But a lawyer for those activists doggedly picked at Sitterud's testimony, trying to show he and other officers and agents were over-eager to blame the activists for a crime of which they were innocent victims.

Activists Darryl Cherney and the late Judi Bari — who died of unrelated causes in 1997 — have sued Sitterud, two other former Oakland police and six current or former FBI agents, claiming the police and agents conspired to frame them as eco-terrorists who knowingly transported the bomb which hurt them. The police and agents aimed to discredit and disrupt Earth First's opposition of old-growth logging in Northern California, the plaintiffs claim.

Dennis Cunningham, the activists' lawyer, did a lot of verbal fencing Monday with Sitterud, pressing the now-retired officer on subjects including how and when he came to believe the bomb was behind — not beneath — Bari's car seat in the hours and days after the May 24, 1990 explosion.

Sitterud insisted he and other investigators went into the case with open minds, but acknowledged FBI agent Frank Doyle — a bomb expert, and another defendant in this lawsuit — told him at the scene that day the bomb had apparently been in plain sight behind the driver's seat. If so, they concluded, the activists must have known it was there.

An FBI forensic expert later reported the bomb seemed to have been out of sight under Bari's seat; Sitterud said that expert's findings weren't definitive.

Cunningham also questioned Sitterud about his interviews that day with Cherney and other Earth First activists. Sitterud said Cherney's initial claim that someone had thrown a bomb through the car's window seemed "an illogical explanation . . . and a symptom of Mr. Cherney's guilt."

And he testified about a meeting that evening between Oakland police and FBI agents to discuss Earth First. Sitterud testified FBI agents, including John Reikes and Phil Sena, recounted Earth First's reputation for violence and sabotage.

Much of Cunningham's questioning Monday seemed aimed at underscoring the speed with which Bari and Cherney were arrested and their homes searched. Sitterud said Doyle's opinion of the bomb's location, the FBI's background information on Earth First and other factors all added up to what he felt at the time was a strong case.

Prosecutors from the Alameda County District Attorney's office — including current District Attorney Thomas Orloff, who will testify later in this trial — said the evidence was strong enough to support search warrants, Sitterud testified.

He also said Orloff left him with the impression "there would be no trouble charging the case," so he was surprised when a different prosecutor days later declined to file charges pending forensic laboratory results. Two months later, prosecutors decided not to charge the activists at all.

Sitterud, on cross-examination by his lawyer in this case, Deputy City Attorney Maria Bee, testified he is or has been a member of groups including the Sierra Club, the Nature Conservancy and Trout Unlimited — an apparent effort to underscore his lack of hostility toward environmental activism.

Sitterud is expected to finish testifying today. Also testifying today will be Oakland Police Sgt. Robert Chenault.

Police, FBI framed activists, lawyer says

By Josh Richman

STAFF WRITER

OAKLAND — FBI agents and Oakland police framed environmental activists Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney for building the bomb which hurt them in a 1990 explosion, the activists' lawyer said Tuesday as the trial of their civil lawsuit began in federal court.

Dennis Cunningham, the plaintiff's lead attorney, finished his opening statement Tuesday. Lawyers for the defendants — nine current and former FBI agents and Oakland officers — will make their opening statements today.

A nine-woman, three-man jury chosen earlier Tuesday morning listened intently as Cunningham accused the defendants of "violating the rights of Judi and Darryl after this bombing of their car" on May 24, 1990, in Oakland by falsely arresting them and illegally searching their homes.

This was done deliberately to discredit the activists' organization, Earth First, which was planning a series of "Redwood Summer" nonviolent protests in 1990 to oppose logging in Northern California's old-growth

Earth First outlines case against FBI, police

Lawyers for Earth First organizers Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney began laying out their case Tuesday against the FBI and Oakland police in U.S. District Court in Oakland, outlining charges against the six agents and three police officers, whom they accuse of false arrests, illegal searches, and violating the pair's First Amendment rights in 1990.

Bari died of cancer in 1997; her estate is pursuing the lawsuit on behalf of her daughters.

In opening remarks, Dennis Cunningham told the jury that from the time of the blast on May 24, 1990, the FBI and Oakland police conspired to frame the pair, singling them out because they belonged to a group known for its unorthodox behavior.

FBI and Oakland police deny the allegations and say that investigators who saw the explosion concluded the bomb had been in a position in the car that was visible, so they suspected that Bari and Cherney were transporting the bomb.

The suit seeks unspecified monetary and punitive damages. Attorneys for the FBI and the Oakland police are scheduled to give their opening statements today.

Activist sings protest at FBI bomb trial

By Josh Richman
STAFF WRITER

OAKLAND — Environmental activist Darryl Cherney belted out his protest song "Spike a Tree for Jesus" in federal court Tuesday during the civil trial of Oakland police and FBI agents who he and the late Judi Bari claim framed them for a 1990 bomb blast.

"(W)hen I think of the cross he was nailed to/ And the tree that was logged for the wood/ I realize 'twas the loggers killed Jesus/ And it's time that we got them back good," the Earth First activist sang from the witness stand as he strummed a guitar.

Cherney apparently meant the song to demonstrate a lighthearted-yet-dedicated approach he and Bari took in raising awareness about the timber industry's felling of Northern California redwoods. Instead it seemed to undermine hours of testimony he had just given about the duo's commitment to nonviolence and renunciation of tree-spiking, a practice which can maim or kill loggers.

Most jurors' initial bemused smiles faded to poker faces or scowls as Cherney sang.

Cherney and Bari — who died of cancer in 1997 — have sued nine current or former Oakland Police officers and FBI agents who they claim framed them for knowingly possessing a bomb which shattered their car May 24, 1990 in Oakland. The authorities aimed to discredit and disrupt Earth First, they say. Prosecutors later cited insufficient evidence to charge the activists, and no other arrests were ever made. Some courtroom observers wept as Cherney described the blast.

"There was a crack, a noise, a loud sound and my head started to ring — it was like a sitar in my head," he said. "Reality was just suddenly completely altered... I have this vague recollection of the car bouncing around."

He was too stunned to realize what had happened at first, he said. "Then two kids came running toward the car with their hands waving, saying 'It's a bomb, it's a bomb,'" he said. "That's when it clicked in my mind that someone had tried to make good on one of those death threats."

He and Bari had received several such threats by then, he said. The pair had been organizing protests against the timber industry in Humboldt and Mendocino counties for years, and Cherney said even some loggers and mill workers had joined their movement, believing companies' greedy harvesting practices soon would leave such workers jobless.

Legal pressure and a media barrage after their arrests kept them from effectively carrying out the series of protests they'd planned for that summer, Cherney said, adding both he and Bari lived in fear ever after.

"There's still a bomber out there and I'm very scared of that — there's someone who tried to kill us," he said. "It feels like the defendants gave anybody who would do harm to environmentalists the green light to go out and try again."

He and Bari had resolved to make their "Redwood Summer" protests strictly nonviolent, based on the Mississippi Summer activism of 1960s civil rights movement, he said.

"Tree-spiking and sabotage in general had no part in anything we were doing, in the field or anywhere else," he said, adding Earth First had a reputation for these things but never actually did them in California.

Cherney acknowledged telling the television news program "60 Minutes" in 1990 that if he ever became terminally ill, he might strap explosives to himself and blow up a dam or a timber company's headquarters. "As I was saying it, I realized what a stupid thing it was — I regretted it immediately," he said.

Cherney said he wrote songs about tree spiking and sabotage "to shock people into awareness" about the forests' plight. He acknowledged saying equipment sabotage could be a valid way to protect forests, but insisted he and Bari didn't allow it on their watch.

Cherney's attorney, Dennis Cunningham, later asked him to sing a song representing those he and Bari used to sing, and Cherney chose "Spike a Tree for Jesus."

FBI, police lauded in Earth First trial

Defense makes its opening statements

By Jim Herron Zamora
CHRONICLE STAFF WRITER

A federal attorney told a jury yesterday that FBI agents did not violate the civil rights of two Earth First organizers in a car bombing investigation 12 years ago.

These are "six dedicated public servants whose job was to protect us from terrorism," Justice Department lawyer Joseph Sher said of the agents in his opening statement at a trial in U.S. District Court in Oakland. The government publicly outlined its case for the first time yesterday.

The agents — most of whom are now retired — and three current and former Oakland police officers are accused in a lawsuit of violating the civil rights of Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney, who were injured by the blast in May 1990 as they drove along Park Boulevard in Oakland.

The lawsuit, filed in 1991, accuses agents and police of illegal search and seizure and of violating Bari's and Cherney's free speech rights by implicating them in the bombing despite evidence that they were innocent. Charges were never filed against the two. Bari died of cancer in 1997, but the suit continues through her estate and her daughters.

Although he did not specifically refer to the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, Sher emphasized the expertise and dedication of the six FBI agents who were members of the counterterrorism squad in Northern California. He noted how members were involved in the Unabom investigation and were involved in protecting the country from potential terrorist attacks during the time leading up to the Gulf War.

In her opening statement, Assistant City Attorney Maria Bee said the Oakland officers operated on the best knowledge and evidence available and relied on the expertise of the FBI in matters dealing with explosives and terrorism.

Dennis Cunningham, the lead attorney for Bari's estate and Cherney, presented his opening remarks on Tuesday, saying that the FBI "framed Judi and Darryl" and that Oakland police were at first "duped" by the FBI and later became "willing participants."

"The bombs struck at them and then the law enforcement struck at them; when (Bari) didn't die, they did a character assassination," Cunningham said.

Trial to plumb mystery of Earth First bombing

By Jim Herron Zamora
CHRONICLE STAFF WRITER

The case seems to have as many conspiracy theories as the Kennedy assassination:

On May 24, 1990, Earth First environmentalists Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney were on their way to Santa Cruz to promote the protection of ancient redwoods, when all of a sudden a nail-studded bomb under the front seat of Bari's Subaru station wagon exploded.

The blast maimed Bari, injured Cherney, besmirched their reputations and discredited Earth First, leaving a cloud over the environmental movement — and a trail of questions that to this day have never been answered.

Were Bari and Cherney "eco-terrorists" — as police first believed — who inadvertently exploded their own bomb?

Or did someone try to assassinate these activists because they were a threat to timber interests and others in California's North Coast?

Or was it something else?

Starting tomorrow, a federal jury in Oakland will try to find the truth in a six-week trial to resolve a lawsuit in which the pair have accused the FBI and Oakland police of violating their civil rights.

Before Judge Claudia Wilken, lawyers for Earth First will argue that investigators violated the pair's rights by ignoring the evidence and treating them as terrorists. The attorneys will get their first chance to publicly interrogate police and FBI officers who allegedly impugned Bari, Cherney and their movement through their biased, sloppy work.

"All we want is the truth. This is not about money or guilt," Cherney said last week. "It's about justice. That can only come from proving that the FBI smeared us personally and used this terrorist attack to discredit a movement. To this day, they consider us the only suspects."

Attorneys defending law enforcement say they also just want the truth, claiming in court papers that Cherney's side is "long on arguments regarding conspiracies and short on proof."

But the thousands of pages of documents that have been filed on the case seem to raise more questions than they answer.

Bari and Cherney claim there was never a legitimate reason to consider Earth First a terrorist group and that the whole bombing investigation was largely a political ploy by the first Bush administration.

But in court papers, lawyers for the FBI and the Oakland Police Department argue that although the investigations may have been flawed, they had reason to suspect the activists and are not liable because they acted in good faith.

The organization had gained notoriety for advocating what it called nonviolent actions, which ranged from driving spikes into trees, in order to blunt chain saws, to toppling electrical transmission towers.

The quest for redemption drove Bari until the end. Before she died of cancer in 1997, Bari made Cherney promise not to settle the case for money but to pursue it until victorious or defeated, Cherney said.

Supporters have spent years of grassroots fund raising to keep the case going, and dozens of volunteers have donated time. A trial campaign headquarters in downtown Oakland, the walls decorated with Earth First posters dating to the 1980s, draws dapper legal workers and scruffy activists.

The day the bomb exploded, things were looking up for Cherney, Bari and their cause. The pair was busily organizing Redwood Summer, a series of peaceful protests against the destruction of old-growth forests.

They had spent the previous night in Berkeley, where the hippie collective Seeds of Peace had agreed to help them feed the expected volunteers. They soon set out for Santa Cruz.

As they traveled on Park Boulevard near Oakland High School, the bomb exploded. Equipped with a crude motion sensor, packed with potassium chlorate and aluminum powder and covered with nails wrapped in duct tape, it ripped through the floorboards.

Cherney received minor injuries. Bari suffered a crushed pelvis and dislocated her back. Nerve damage paralyzed her right foot and permanently numbed her sexual organs.

But her worst injury, she later said, was to her reputation.

Oakland police at the scene were joined by FBI agents, who said Earth First was already under investigation for alleged terrorism. While Bari was in intensive care at Highland Hospital, she and Cherney were arrested on felony explosives charges.

In search warrants, police asserted that the explosive was on the car's back seat and must have been in plain view. They also claimed that a search of the car yielded a separate bag of nails identical to the bomb nails.

But within days, the case started to fall apart. The FBI later concluded that the bomb had been placed under the driver's seat and covered with a towel. And the nails didn't match. Those used in the bomb had round heads while the other nails had flat heads.

Six days after the bombing, a Santa Rosa Press-Democrat reporter received a letter taking responsibility for the explosion.

Signed "The Lord's Avenger," the letter said Bari was targeted for leading counterdemonstrators at an anti-abortion rally at Ukiah's Planned Parenthood office in 1988.

The letter's detailed description of the car bomb and of a different pipe bomb found at a Louisiana Pacific mill in Cloverdale earlier that month was confirmed by the FBI. The letter's author "had direct access to specific information about both devices" that showed "close participation . . . with the bomb maker," the FBI said.

Six weeks after the bombing, Alameda County prosecutors dropped the charges against Bari and Cherney, citing insufficient evidence to secure a conviction.

The FBI looked at the case for two more years until a spokesman finally admitted in 1993 that investigators had "exhausted all the leads."

Oakland police say their investigation is not officially closed but remains "dormant."

Meanwhile the bomber's trail has been cold for more than a decade, and neither the FBI nor Oakland police have apologized.

"Someone almost killed me and ruined my life, and they think I should be satisfied with the finding I didn't bomb myself," Bari said in a 1993 interview.

"The FBI helped cover the bomber's tracks," Cherney said. "Every day I live with the knowledge that no one has ever seriously tried to arrest the person responsible for a bomb that could have killed me."

Despite Bari's death and repeated efforts by federal officials to have the case dismissed, the suit survives because it reveals discrepancies in the initial investigation.

For example, FBI agents later denied telling Oakland police the pair were terrorists, contradicting a sworn statement officers used to get a search warrant in 1990.

In ruling that the case could go forward, several judges have criticized the investigation and denied officers and agents immunity.

"The Department seemed to have no interest in investigating anybody except the people who were bombed," wrote Judge Stephen Reinhardt in a 1999 ruling that kept the suit alive.

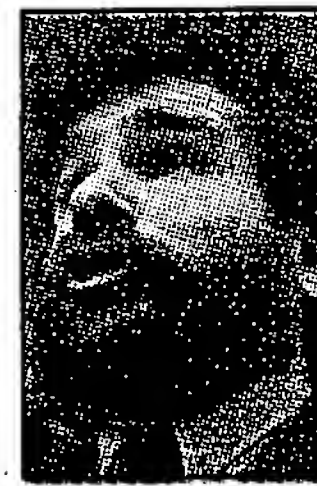

Bari died believing that she and Cherney were victims of a conspiracy, but it remains to be seen whether the trial that survives will tell the tale's end.

"It's not a mistake: It was all a big lie," Cherney said last week. "The FBI never wanted to catch the bomber. They wanted to destroy Earth First."

Bari, Cherney civil trial begins in Oakland

By Colleen Valles
ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAN FRANCISCO — Nearly 12 years after two environmentalists were injured by a car bomb, members of the FBI and Oakland Police Department will have to explain allegations that they mishandled the investigation.

The trial, set to begin today, has been in the works since Earth First! activists Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney filed suit in 1991, charging false arrest, illegal search and seizure and conspiracy to violate their free speech rights. Bari's estate is now a party in the suit. She died of cancer in 1997.

Cherney said he believes the authorities used the May 1990 bombing to try to silence them.

"Our lawsuit will hopefully increase public awareness so we can put pressure on our government so we can hold our FBI accountable," Cherney said. "We are charging the FBI knew for a fact that we were innocent, and yet blamed us for bombing ourselves because of our political position as environmentalists."

The agencies said they did their job well.

The Oakland Police Department had little experience with explosives and relied on the FBI for its expertise, said Oakland city attorney Karen Boyd.

"We're confident a jury, after listening to the facts, will conclude there were no constitutional violations of anyone's rights," she said. "The officers did what they could to protect the welfare of the community, and they did their job in a professional and thorough manner."

Bari was at the wheel and Cherney was a passenger when the bomb exploded. She suffered a crushed pelvis, and Cherney suffered cuts.

Police searched their homes, named the two as the main suspects and arrested them on suspicion of transporting explosives. But the district attorney said there was not enough evidence to prosecute. No one has ever been charged with the crime.

Cherney said he and Bari had received numerous death threats prior to the bombing. He said the bomb had a motion sensor, which means the car had to be moving for the bomb to go off.

"The bomb was designed to kill a human being in a moving vehicle," he said.

At the time of the bombing, Bari and Cherney were organizing and promoting "Redwood Summer," a series of protests against the logging of old-growth redwood forests.

Earth First! has gained a reputation for sabotage, known as "monkey-wrenching," including doing such things as driving spikes into trees to damage logging equipment.

But Cherney said in its 22 years, Earth First! has never injured a human. And he said Northern California Earth First activists especially have a well-established code of nonviolence.

"I have never engaged in an act of sabotage," he said. "In our bags in the car when we were arrested were freshly created documents for our nonviolent code and nonviolent training, including no destruction of property."

Shortly after the bombing, an anonymous letter sent to The Press Democrat in Santa Rosa included specific details about the construction and placement of the bomb and included never-disclosed information about a different bombing that damaged a Cloverdale lumber mill also in May 1990.

The letter writer, claiming to be "the Lord's avenger," took credit for the bombings, and claimed to be driven by religious zeal and anger at Bari's opposition to timber cutting.

Dennis Cunningham, attorney for the environmentalists, said they are seeking unspecified monetary damages in the trial that will be held in federal court in Oakland.

Judge scolds lawyers for Earth First activists

By Josh Richman
 STAFF WRITER

OAKLAND — A federal judge rebuked two lawyers for Earth First activists Tuesday, barring them from being anywhere near the courthouse while jurors deliberating their clients' lawsuit are coming or going.

Jurors indicated Monday they might have reached unanimous decisions on some parts of their verdict. U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken sent them back to keep deliberating the rest.

Jurors were leaving the courthouse Friday as supporters of Darryl Cherney and the late Judi Bari staged a rally marking the 12th anniversary of the bomb explosion which hurt the pair. Attorney J. Tony Serra was addressing the crowd as jurors passed, expressing confidence they would prevail and asking the crowd to send the jury thoughts and prayers for objectivity.

Lawyers for the seven current or former FBI agents and Oakland Police officers whom the activists have sued asked U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken to dismiss the case, arguing Serra's comment tainted the jury's deliberations.

Wilken refused, but decided to warn jurors against considering anything they heard at the rally and tell them Serra's actions were "exceedingly improper." Serra's co-counsel Robert Bloom objected to the latter part, saying it would prejudice the jury because Serra said nothing at the rally which had not already been said to jurors during the trial.

"Where do we have trials, Mr. Bloom? In the courtroom or out in the plaza?" Wilken asked angrily.

Bloom contended the annual rally's organizers obtained a permit for Friday's event months ago, and never intended to influence deliberations. Serra said he hadn't even realized what happened.

"I never saw the jury nor did I know that unfortunately they had come out while I was speaking," he said. "The spirit of what I said was in no way inflammatory."

Wilken ended up admonishing the jury that it's "improper for attorneys to address jurors, particularly on the subject of the pending case" outside the courtroom and they should "disregard any such comments or anything you may have seen at that rally."

Wilken also ordered Cherney and his entire legal team from being near the courthouse or across the street in Oakland's City Center during periods around when the jury arrives in the morning, goes out for lunch and leaves in the afternoon.

Bari — who died of cancer in 1997 — and Cherney were hurt in a pipe bomb explosion that shattered Bari's car May 24, 1990, in Oakland. At the time, they were organizing a "Redwood Summer" to protest the timber industry's clear-cutting of Northern California's old-growth forests. Oakland police arrested them hours after the blast, telling the press they were eco-terrorists who had knowingly possessed the bomb for their own nefarious plans. But two months later, prosecutors declined to charge them, citing insufficient evidence; nobody else was ever arrested.

The activists sued the FBI and Oakland police in 1991, claiming the agencies conspired to violate their Fourth and First Amendment rights by falsely arresting them and illegally searching their homes in a frame-up to discredit and disrupt their work.

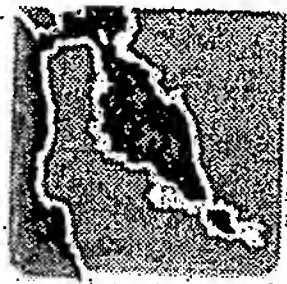

The jury sent out a note Monday asking, "If there is one or more claims that we cannot agree on, can we still submit a unanimous verdict on all other claims or does this constitute a 'hung jury?' In other words, do we have to reach a unanimous decision on every claim?"

Wilken told jurors they could return unanimous verdicts for certain claims and defendants, to be sealed until they reach unanimous verdicts on the rest. Urging them to attempt unanimity on as many elements as possible, she asked them to keep deliberating.

Deliberations continue today.

Motion to dismiss Earth First case rejected

A federal judge in Oakland Tuesday denied a government motion to dismiss the Earth First case against the FBI and Oakland police.

Attorneys for the FBI and Oakland police filed the motion Friday, saying remarks at a rally by lawyers for Earth First activists tainted jury deliberations. The jury has been deliberating for more than a week in the case filed by Darryl Cherney and Judi Bari alleging civil rights violations.

U.S. District Court Judge Claudia Wilken told jurors to ignore remarks they might have heard, and ordered plaintiff's attorneys to stay away from the courthouse plaza and surrounding restaurants when the jury is entering, leaving or breaking for lunch.

Bari bomb jurors apparently having a real tough time

After 2 weeks of deliberations, still haven't reached all verdicts

By Jim Herron Zamora
CHRONICLE STAFF WRITER

After more than two weeks of deliberations, jurors appear to be struggling over whether FBI agents and Oakland police violated the civil rights of two Earth First organizers injured in a car bombing 12 years ago.

The 10-person jury indicated in a note to U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken on Tuesday that they may be split as to the culpability of one or two of the seven law enforcement defendants in the civil trial.

Wilken said the jury asked her whether verdicts in the cases of five or six of the seven defendants — all current and former FBI agents or Oakland police officers — but not others would force a retrial for everyone. Wilken told jurors that a mistrial would only apply to defendants they could not agree upon.

The jury asked the judge several questions about possible outcome scenarios, but Wilken told jurors to focus on the job at hand and sent them back into deliberations.

The suit accuses the defendants, who were all involved in the investigation of a 1990 car bombing that injured activists Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney, of treating innocent victims as suspected terrorists.

Law enforcement officers used the criminal investigation to conduct illegal searches and arrests, and to discredit the First Amendment activities of Earth First, the suit alleges.

Bari and Cherney were arrested in the bombing but later freed for lack of evidence. No other suspects were seriously investigated until months later. Bari died of cancer in 1997.

Government lawyers, who spent a decade fighting to have the case dismissed without a trial, have argued that investigators did the best they could with the facts available to them.

The trial began April 8 and featured testimony from various experts, some of whom claimed authorities made errors in the first days of the investigation and acted upon assumptions that later proved incorrect.

After they began deliberating, jurors asked for copies of the First and Fourth amendments to the Constitution; the plaintiffs claim those rights were violated. Government attorneys objected, and Wilken compromised by reading the text of the amendments to jurors but not giving them copies.

The complexity of the 18-page verdict form may be making matters more difficult. In order to find for the plaintiffs on all counts against all defendants, the jury would have to adopt 55 unanimous votes. To award damages they would have to all agree on 112 additional votes.

"It's an incredibly cumbersome process," said Bill Simpich, an attorney for the activists.

Judge urges jury to reach verdicts in Earth First case

No clue to outcome after 12 days

By Josh Richman
STAFF WRITER

Despite a false alarm Tuesday, there still is no verdict in sight as jurors continue deliberating two Earth First activists' civil rights lawsuit against Oakland Police officers and FBI agents.

The eight-woman, two-man jury has had the case for 12 days, and on Tuesday announced its schedule for deliberations today, Thursday and Friday.

The jury is struggling to decide whether three current or former Oakland Police officers and four current or former FBI agents violated the Constitutional rights of activists Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney, and if they did, to what extent each of them should be made to pay.

U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken drew up new verdict forms Tuesday, should jurors decide they want to deliver unanimous verdicts on some parts of the case but not others.

Attorneys debated whether the jury would still be able to split up financial liability among some defendants while remaining uncertain whether others are liable at all. Wilken said that's not her concern right now.

"If I have to throw out verdicts later, I'll throw them out, but I at least want to get some," she said.

Bari — who died of cancer in 1997 — and Cherney were hurt when a pipe bomb shattered Bari's car May 24, 1990 in Oakland. They had come to town while organizing a "Redwood Summer" to protest the timber industry's clear-cutting of Northern California's old-growth forests.

Oakland Police arrested them hours after the blast, accusing them of being eco-terrorists who had knowingly possessed the bomb for their own nefarious plans. But prosecutors two months later declined to charge them, citing insufficient evidence. Nobody else was ever arrested.

The activists sued the FBI and Oakland Police in 1991, claiming agents and officers conspired to violate their Fourth and First Amendment rights by falsely arresting them and illegally searching their homes in a frame-up to discredit and disrupt their political work.

ating May 17 and can keep going as long as they feel they're making progress.

Jurors sent Wilken a note late Monday saying they've reached unanimity on some issues but not others, and asking a few hypothetical questions. They wanted to know whether the whole case would have to be retried if they couldn't reach verdicts for all defendants, and whether defendants found not liable would be immune from a second trial.

Plaintiffs' attorneys believed and announced that partial verdicts might be entered Tuesday, but that didn't happen. Wilken told jurors she would accept partial verdicts but encouraged them to keep working toward unanimity on the whole case. She told them to concentrate on reaching verdicts, not pondering those verdicts' legal implications.

If the jury can't decide whether certain defendants are liable, then a new trial could be held for those defendants.

Plaintiffs attorney Dennis Cunningham said outside court Tuesday that he's "maybe a little" surprised the jury has been out so long.

"Every time they give you something that seems like a trend, they take you back the other way," he said, observing jurors look relaxed and seem amicable toward one another, so whatever differences of opinion they harbor probably haven't become nasty or personal.

Jury still deliberating activists' civil rights case

After 12 days deliberating, jurors in Judi Bari and Darryl Cherney's civil rights case against Oakland police and the FBI left the courthouse Tuesday without verdicts.

But they did pose hypothetical scenarios to the judge, asking questions such as whether any defendants found not liable would be free from another trial.

U.S. District Court Judge Claudia Wilken told them to focus on reaching full verdicts, not on ramifications of their decisions.

The jury is pondering 18 pages of questions involving allegations of false arrests, illegal searches, violations of First Amendment rights and conspiracy following the May 24, 1990, car bombing that crushed Bari's pelvis.

Earth First bomb case goes to jurors

Final arguments give varied views of authorities

By Jim Herron Zamora
CHRONICLE STAFF WRITER

The two sides in the federal lawsuit over the investigation of the 1990 car bombing that injured two Earth First organizers in East Oakland offered jurors starkly different views Friday of how well authorities did their job.

"You've got to send a message that the lies and false claims in this case will never happen to someone else," said J. Tony Serra, one of three attorneys for Darryl Cherney and the estate of the late activist Judi Bari.

"The only evidence is that four honorable, experienced law enforcement officers investigated criminal conduct," said Joseph Sher, attorney for four FBI agents. "There is no other evidence."

The closing arguments concluded Friday in the six-week trial in federal court in Oakland, and the jury is scheduled to continue deliberating on Monday.

Four FBI agents and three Oakland police officers are accused in the suit of violating the civil rights of Cherney and Bari.

The suit accuses the seven of false arrests, illegal searches, slanderous statements and conspiracy. Earlier this week, U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken ruled that there was not sufficient evidence of culpability by two other former agents and dropped them from the case.

The core of the suit is that Cherney and Bari, who were injured in the bomb blast that damaged her car May 24, 1990, were considered by authorities to be the only suspects even though the evidence made it clear they were victims of a "political assassination" attempt.

The two were arrested in the bombing but later freed for lack of evidence.

The suit alleges that law enforcement used the investigation to undermine Earth First's credibility and efforts by Bari and Cherney to organize Redwood Summer, a series of anti-logging protests in 1990.

The plaintiffs have tried to show that investigators ignored evidence that the two were not responsible for the bombing.

They pointed out that authorities said at the time of the arrests that the bomb was in the back of the car where Bari and Cherney, would have seen it.

The car in which two Earth First organizers were injured by a bomb.

The main FBI lab outside Washington, D.C., later concluded the bomb had been shoved under the front seat of Bari's Subaru station wagon.

Sher and Maria Bee, attorney for the three Oakland police officers, told the 10-member jury that investigators made a good-faith attempt to find the bombers.

Sher, a senior attorney with the U.S. Department of Justice, testified that four bomb technicians at the scene, near Park and MacArthur boulevards, all concluded that the car's passengers must have known about the device.

Federal agents who had studied Earth First as well as alleged acts of sabotage by environmentalists did their duty by sharing their knowledge with Oakland police, Sher said.

"I'm asking if you want to live in a world where officers investigating an undisputed crime are afraid to share information with other officers," Sher said, because of possible litigation.

The three plaintiffs' attorneys — Serra, Robert Bloom and Dennis Cunningham — offered a totally different interpretation.

"They let these people go that did this," Cunningham said. "No effort was ever made to find him or them."

Bloom went through the testimony of several defendants in detail, pointing out what he called lies and distortions.

He noted that in many instances, law enforcement officers offered contradictory accounts of the decisions leading up to the arrest of Cherney and Bari.

"They both can't be telling the truth," Bloom said. "It's up to you to decide which one is lying."

He asked the jury to read between the lines and "use your common sense" because no one in law enforcement is going to admit a conspiracy.

Bloom and Cunningham both apologized to the jury for a decision to have Cherney sing one of his songs — "Spike a Tree for Jesus" — from the witness chair during the trial.

"The music, the lyrics are an in-your-face kind of thing," Bloom said.

But Bloom argued that such antics paled in comparison to the "deliberate distortions and misstatement of the facts" by FBI agents and police.

"Their coverup continues to this day," he said.

Jury starts deliberations in Earth First suit

By Josh Richman
STAFF WRITER

OAKLAND — FBI agents and Oakland Police officers reasonably believed two Earth First activists were hurt by their own bomb in a 1990 explosion, and had probable cause to arrest them and search their homes, government lawyers argued Friday.

They said there is no evidence that agents and officers conspired to frame Judi

Bari and Darryl Cherney in order to smear their reputations and foil their political work.

"Our purpose here is not to pass judgment on whether the investigation was perfect, whether everything was done that should have been done," U.S. Justice Department lawyer R. Joseph Sher told jurors. "But don't make these people who were there have to know everything before they do anything — that's just not the way things work."

The six-week trial of a federal civil lawsuit brought by Cherney and the late Bari, who died of cancer in 1997, concluded Friday with the defendants' closing arguments and a brief rebuttal from an attorney for the activists. A jury of eight women and two men began deliberating Friday afternoon and will continue Monday.

Hours after a bomb shattered their car on May 24, 1990, the anti-logging activists were arrested and accused of being eco-terrorists who knowingly had transported the bomb. Prosecutors two months later said there was not enough evidence with which to charge them. The activists sued in 1991, claiming police and agents had falsely arrested them and illegally searched their homes in a frame-up scheme meant to discredit and disrupt Earth First.

Six current or former FBI agents and three current or former Oakland Police officers stood accused at the trial's start, but U.S. District Judge Claudia Wilken on Wednesday dismissed FBI defendants Walter Hemje and John Conway, ruling there was not enough evidence implicating them.

Sher said Friday the remaining FBI defendants had good reasons for advice they gave Oakland officers in the hours between the blast and the arrests and searches.

Four bomb experts who saw Bari's car that day — only one of whom is a defendant in this case — believed the bomb must have been in plain sight on the rear seat's floorboards, indicating Bari and Cherney knew it was there, Sher said. Bari's injuries did not rule out that theory, he added.

While the plaintiffs claimed nobody would be foolish enough to knowingly carry an armed bomb, Sher argued Friday a short circuit could have triggered it prematurely.

Sher likened miscommunication which might have led Oakland Sgt. Robert Chenault to believe FBI agent Frank Doyle had said nails identical to the bomb's were found elsewhere in Bari's car to the "telephone" game, in which a message is passed along a line of whispering children: "Each step of the way it changes, and nobody is lying."

He said agents John Reikes and Phil Sena had to tell Oakland officers what they knew of Earth First's reputation for sabotage. "I ask you to consider whether you want to live in a world in which officers investigating a crime conceal information from each other" fearing a lawsuit like this, he said.

There is no evidence the FBI agents were biased against Earth First, he said: "The evidence shows that four experienced, honest law enforcement officers investigated criminal conduct."

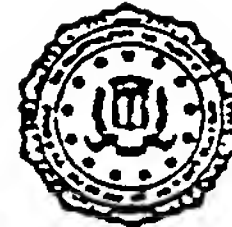

Oakland Deputy City Attorney Maria Bee challenged Bari's and Cherney's commitment to nonviolence, citing evidence such as a photo of Bari with an assault weapon; a road-spiking sabotage kit found that day in Cherney's van; Cherney's distribution of a book detailing sabotage methods; and a television interview in which Cherney said if ever he became terminally ill, he would consider suicide-bombing a dam or a timber company office.

"Nonviolence? I don't think so," Bee said, reminding jurors of Cherney's courtroom rendition of his "Spike a Tree for Jesus" protest song. "And they compare themselves to the civil rights activists of the 1960s? How dare they?"

Nothing contradicts officers' testimony that they knew nothing about Earth First before the bombing, and so could not have meant to smear the group, Bee said: "Everything they did was reasonable, based on the information they had at the time."
